Ky. Counts 50 Drowned, Flood Toll May Be 200

By the Associated Press.

Morehead, Ky., July 4.—A series of "flash floods," coursing down the narrow creek valleys of half a dozen eastern Kentucky mountain counties today left in their wake a toll of at least 50 dead, and 81 missing. Thirty-five bodies had been recovered.

Expressions of fear that the death toll in the mountains—many sections of which may not be accessible for days because of the many bridges washed out and poor communication facilities — may run above the 200 mark came from Government relief officials.

Morehead was the worst hit of the many communities flooded. Postmaster W. E. Crutcher said 38 drowned in this area. Twenty-six bodies were recovered.

Seventy-five miles almost due south in Breathitt County, Sheriff Walter Deaton reported 7 known dead and 69 missing at Keck, on Frozen Creek, 10 miles west of Jackson, the county seat.

College Washed Away

The Rev. Lillie McConnell, woman head of the Mountain Bible Institute, near Jackson, said the water carried away college buildings, including a dormitory housing 25 boys and girls. Nine students were missing, she said.

The Red Cross gave out a report received from Roger W. Jones, chairman of the Breathitt County Red Cross, that "75 to 100 drowned or were missing on Frozen Creek. Ten to 20 homes swept away. Hunting Creek flooded, but no reports of loss of life."

The United States engineers' office at Cincinnati received a report that "between 25 and 30 persons" drowned in a "flash" flood in Carter County, east of here. However, Police Chief C. B. Womack, at Grayson, Carter County seat, said a "fairly complete check" disclosed no loss of life.

Two Towns Isolated

Water completely isolated Farmers, a community of 250 persons, 7 miles west of here, and Clearfield, a factory settlement of 500 persons across Triplett Creek from Morehead.

It was feared the death toll in both communities would be high, as the towns apparently bore the brunt of the water's force.

Sheriff Deaton at Jackson led a rescue party up the narrow gorge of Troublesome and Quicksand creeks in an effort to reach stranded persons. Deaton expressed fear that when rescuers succeeded in getting back into the valley the death list would soar above the first estimate of ten in that area.

The floods before dawn followed a cloudburst late last night as creeks and streams, cramped in narrow banks in widely separated sections of the mountain country, were unable to carry the water off fast enough. At many points residents reported streams rose 10 to 15 feet in less than an hour.

Highway bridges were washed away, railroad tracks twisted and undermined and highways blocked with debris. Telephone and telegraph linesmen struggled to restore the almost wholly disrupted communications in the stricken area.

Two Cloudbursts

At least two distinct cloudbursts apparently struck eastern Kentucky during the night, as Morehead and Jackson are in different watersheds and the cloudbursts hit at separate hours. The deluge struck here shortly before midnight and at Jackson at 3 a. m.

Dr. Philip E. Blackerby, assistant Kentucky health director, dispatched doctors, nurses and medical supplies to Morehead. Gov. A. B. Chandler ordered 15 State patrolmen and State highway emergency crews sent here to aid rescue workers.

2 Hurt in Blast In Philadelphia

Philadelphia, July 5 (AP).—Two persons were injured severely tonight by the explosion of an incendiary bomb hurled into a beauty shop. Several pedestrians were cut by flying glass and hurled to the ground.

Charles Shaffer, 40, proprietor of the shop, and John Dash, an assistant, were treated for serious burns.

Propaganda to Confuse Democracies, Browder Retorts at Institute

By Hedley Donovan.
A Staff Correspondent.

Charlottesville, Va., July 5.—Dr. Friedrich E. Auhagen, Nazi spokesman, tonight told the Institute of Public Affairs that if neither Germany nor Russia can find friends in the West, "they are likely to ask, 'Why not get together ourselves?' "

BROWDER

The suggestion of Nazi-Bolshevik collaboration is "deliberate propaganda from Berlin to confuse the democracies," the same Institute session was heatedly informed by Earl Browder, general secretary of the American Communist Party in the United States.

"There is as much chance of Russia and Germany coming together," America's No. 1 Communist said, "as of Earl Browder being elected president of the United States Chamber of Commerce."

Browder, who is stopping overnight at the Farmington Country Club, appeared in white shoes and neat gray suit before an audience of more than 1,000.

"Red Peril"

"I am supposed to be the personification of the red peril in America," he announced in the course of expression of thanks to the Dies committee "for publicity worth at least $20,000,000 to the Communist Party."

Inclusion of Browder on the Institute program, already under fire from Virginia department of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, yesterday was attacked in a resolution adopted by the United Spanish War Veterans, in encampment at Roanoke.

These protests, Browder told the writer, "violate one of the most honored American traditions, that of free speech and intellectual hospitality."

Dr. Auhagen, whose speech was received in the same silence that greeted Browder's address, charged that a vicious anti-Nazi propaganda is forcing German-Americans to leave the United States at the rate of 50,000 per year.

Jobs in Peril

"They are leaving this country," the founder and director of the "American Fellowship Forum" asserted, "not because they do not love America, not because they do not love democracy, but because life has been made impossible for them here.

"If they so much as open their mouths to say one good word for anything Hitler has done, they are immediately accused of being Nazi propagandists and lose their jobs," he continued. "When they leave they take with them their bank

Hitler Shortens His Title to Der Fuehrer

Berlin, July 5 (AP).—Adolf Hitler has shortened his official title from "Der Fuehrer und Reichskanzler" (the leader and Reichs chancellor) to just "Der Fuehrer."

Henceforth he will sign "Der Fuehrer," and newspapers, official documents and public speakers will refer to him as such.

The reason given for the change was:

"The title of chancellor gave Hitler an air of being a functionary or politician, whereas he is the beloved leader of his people."

Britain Plans Loans to Arm Small Allies

Intends to Warn Hitler Any Attempt On Danzig Will Bring Quick Intervention

Special Cable to The Post.

London, July 5.—The Cabinet tonight approved a blunt new Anglo-French warning against Nazi seizure of Danzig, and decided to back it up with a request to Parliament to allot to Britain's continental allies trade and defense credits totaling approximately $500,000,000.

Primary object of the credit scheme is to gird the minor adherents to the Anglo-French "peace front" for war. The states in mind include Poland, Rumania, Turkey and Greece, each of which has asked London for financial assistance to bolster its defenses.

It is understood that Prime Minister Chamberlain in the House of Commons tomorrow will read a declaration flatly warning Reichsfuehrer Hitler that any move to change the status of the Free City from within or without, except by free negotiations, would be the signal for military action by Poland, backed by Britain and France with all the resources at their disposal.

Polish Approval Reported

The declaration, reportedly already approved by the Polish government, was considered by the cabinet tonight after the prime minister had been pressed in Commons for clearer statements as to Britain's intentions regarding assistance to the Poles.

Parliamentary opposition, however, remained suspicious that the government might attempt to escape its obligations to Poland after a statement by Richard Austen Butler, parliamentary undersecretary for foreign affairs, that Britain is committed to aid Poland only if there is a "very clear" threat to Polish independence.

The credit project provides for expansion of a scheme of guarantees against loss for British manufacturers or exporters who desire to ship goods to a country under circumstances which would not afford a justifiable commercial risk. Apart from thus enjoying increased security through arming allies, Great Britain would profit through the material increase in her export trade.

Poles Get Priority

The claim of the Polish government to financial aid is considered to have priority, not only because of the imminent danger of trouble over Danzig, but because a Polish financial mission has been in London, seeking to arrange a deal. The Poles alone are understood to be asking for aid totalling £40,000,000 ($187,200,000).

The full extent of the credits would be between £100,000,000 ($468,000,000) and £150,000,000 ($702,000,000).

Legislation designed to carry out the credit plan is expected to be introduced in the House of Commons within the next few days.

Meanwhile, negotiations for an Anglo-French-Soviet defensive alliance again have been snagged.

Polish Disagreement

The virtual liquidation of the Baltic issue as the result of the Anglo-French decision to meet the Soviet demand for public guarantees to Finland, Esthonia and Latvia has served apparently only to raise new problems. In return for their willingness to concede this point, London and Paris asked that Switzerland, Holland and Luxemburg be included.

Moscow, it appears, expressed a willingness in turn to grant this request but only on condition that arrangements are made for a full-fledged mutual aid pact between the Soviet on the one hand, and

Chief Justice Hughes' Former Law Clerk Faces Check Charge

By the Associated Press

New York, July 5.—A man who said he prepared the legal briefs for the cases killing the NRA and the Guffey coal act while working as a law clerk for Chief Justice Charles Evans Hughes, was arrested today on a charge of passing bad checks totaling $471.

He was booked as John Reynolds Robertson, 35, and said he was an attorney, of 1028 Connecticut avenue, Washington, D. C. He was arrested after William McDermott, credit manager of the Waldorf-Astoria, claimed he had paid hotel bills with worthless checks.

Detective Hugh Fox said the man admitted the checks were bad and that he had signed them with the name of Henry Root Stern, lawyer and former treasurer of the New York Republican State committee.

Fox said he asked the prisoner if he had cashed bad checks before, and the answer was: "I did. I signed Chief Justice Charles Evans Hughes' name to checks. I signed Chief Justice William Howard Taft's name to checks. I signed Mr. Stern's name to checks before, also Paul Cravath's name." (Cravath is a nationally known lawyer.)

According to Fox, the prisoner said:

"I've never been arrested before. I've always covered up on those checks, or made good somehow. If you give me a chance now I can make good on these present checks. I have plenty of money in a Washington bank."

Fox said Robertson would be arraigned in night court.

Robertson said he was a colonel in the U. S. Army Reserve Corps, a Yale graduate of the 1929 class and former football star, and that he had also served as a law clerk for the late Justice Taft.

Senate Insists House Raise Funds for D. C.

Security Board Asked To Put Up $100,000 For Blind, Children

The Social Security Board this morning will consider an extraordinary request from the District Commissioners that $100,000 be advanced to make partial payments to 3,000 aged persons, to the blind and to dependent children—denied funds since July 1 because of the Congressional deadlock on the District supply bill.

As the request was forwarded to the board yesterday, some 500 persons on relief stormed the headquarters for food distribution, 615 D street southwest, following a four-day wait for the office to open.

The persons who applied for surplus foods, a portion of the 3,000 persons on relief, were given no assurances when their checks could be made available.

For the persons on the old age, blind and dependent children rolls, hope was high the Social Security Board would approve the Commissioners' request, assuring these groups of a partial payment.

Normally, the board provides the District with funds to pay those in this category, providing the District government matches the payments. The $100,000 figure, it was explained, would equal the average payments for two months. The Commissioners have requested the Security Board to advance money for July and August.

Following a conference yesterday in the District Building, Commissioner George E. Allen said $170,000 was needed to issue all relief checks. Of this $83,000 is for old-age assistance, $5,800 for the blind, $46,000 for home care and aid to dependent children, and about $35,-

Randolph Hopeful Compromise Can Be Made on Lump Sum

The Senate last night by a vote of 71 to 1 backed Senator Overton (Democrat), of Louisiana, to the limit in his fight with House conferees for a larger Federal payment to the District government.

It was an unusual vote of confidence for the chairman of the Senate sub-committee on District appropriations and a snappy retort to the two roll-call votes of the House to stand pat on the $5,000,000.

The lone dissent came from Overton's colleague, Senator Ellender (Democrat), of Louisiana, who hastened to explain that he opposed the Overton land ratio formula in principle but still had the utmost respect for the Senator. The present $5,000,000 payment, Ellender said, is ample.

The Senate vote followed a brief discussion of the lump sum controversy in which several Senators took the floor to praise Overton and to criticize indirectly the adamant attitude of the House.

Senator Glass Democrat), of Virginia, said emphatically that "It's a question of whether the Senate of the United States is a part of the legislative branch of the Federal Government."

Senator Byrnes (Democrat), of South Carolina, after questioning Overton about the status of the appropriations bill, suggested that if the House persisted in its refusal to compromise and at the same time declined to offer a continuing resolution, the Senate originate the resolution to forestall a local financial crisis on July 15, the next pay day.

After the roll-call vote, which was taken on a motion to return the Dis-

Half of Recreation Centers Shut Pending Supply Bill Passage

Unless the House and Senate act quickly to approve the now deadlocked District supply bill, Congress may find itself the unwitting ally of death-at-the-wheel, with District children as the victims.

Until the supply bill is adopted, releasing a $25,000 fund, more than one-half of the city's 218 play centers will remain closed, forcing children to play in the streets, where 106 children have been killed by autos and other vehicles since 1931.

Each day's delay in ending the Congressional stalemate imperils an increasing number of children, officials declared, as lack of funds may bring about the closing of playgrounds now open.

Workers Serve Without Pay

The city has 218 playgrounds, of which 175 are operated by the Community Center and 43 by the District Playground Department.

Centers in the playground department's jurisdiction are being kept open under adult supervision, although operating and maintenance funds have been exhausted. The playground workers have agreed to continue on the job, pay or no pay, until Congress settles its legislative dispute.

The Community Center is keeping 63 of its 175 school ground play areas open, but Mrs. Elizabeth K. Peeples, director, indicated yesterday that no additional recreation spots will be opened to the children until funds are available.

School authorities are unwilling to open the unused grounds for play centers unless there can be proper supervision by trained play councilors, Mrs. Peeples pointed out.

City-wide Safety Program

The District Traffic Advisory Council, together with the Board of Trade and the Junior Board of Commerce, have joined in a move to foster a city-wide safety program for the summer months, when vacationing pupils face intensified street hazards. The safety program calls in part for ample accessible play spots so that children will not have to play in the streets.

The 106 children killed in Washington streets since 1931 ranged from the ages of 4 to 14.

Hundreds will be exposed to similar tragedies, it was observed by playground officials, if the play centers are not opened.

8 of 58 Arrested For Fireworks Fined $5 to $10

Ten violators of the District ban against fireworks appeared in Police Court before Judge Hobart Newman yesterday, as an aftermath of police efforts to make the Fourth of July safe. Eight paid fines ranging from $5 to $10; two were released.

Fifty-eight offenders had been arrested over the long holiday weekend, and most of them forfeited $5 collateral.

One of the alleged violators was released on personal bond when his attorney pleaded that the client had been firing "only little crackers" and was not making "big noises" as mentioned in the ban.

House Votes Claim, Echo of Dry Era

The House voted yesterday to pay George Slade, colored, of Norfolk, Va., $4,500 because he was shot and crippled for life on October 31, 1924, by J. G. Griffin, prohibition enforcement officer.

The bill, introduced by Representative Darden (Democrat), of Virginia, now goes to the Senate.

After the shooting of Slade, a committee report said, Griffin was dismissed by the Treasury Department for disregard of rules relative to the use of firearms.

He Cut Off Pet's Tail to Make It Look Like Bulldog

To make his mongrel pet look like a bulldog was the reason Naymon Reed, colored, 21, cut off his dog's tail, he explained in Police Court yesterday.

Pleading guilty to a charge of cruelty to animals, Reed told the court that in South Carolina all that had to be done was place the animal's tail on a block, chop down with a sharp ax, and then apply salt to the wound.

Policeman David McCutcheon testified that he arrested the colored man after witnessing the amputation and then took the dog to a veterinarian. The animal doctor said, according to the policeman, that more of the tail would have to be taken off before the dog could sit comfortably.

Judge Edward M. Curran continued the case until the probation officer conducts an investigation.

Senate Restores Money Powers To President

Neutrality Action Delayed; Leaders Are Confident of Vote Before Adjournment

The Senate Foreign Relations Committee yesterday postponed, for the fourth consecutive time, action on the Administration's neutrality proposals, but leaders were confident the issue will be carried to a vote at this session.

With Chairman Key Pittman absent, the committee agreed in a 15-minute meeting to consider the measure again on Saturday.

Arriving late at the Capitol after a stormy journey across Chesapeake Bay, Senator Pittman expressed his conviction there will be no adjournment of Congress until neutrality is disposed of.

Barkley Expects Decision

Senate Majority Leader Barkley is understood to have given similar assurances to President Roosevelt earlier at a White House conference. Barkley told reporters he would make no forecast on what kind of bill will come out of the committee, but said he is convinced a majority of the committee favors settling the issue.

"I presume the committee will proceed with the House bill as a basis, and offer amendments to bring it into line with their own views," said Barkley. "The bill was only messaged from the House today, and was not before the committee this morning."

The House bill, sharply modifying the Administration's plan for outright repeal of the arms embargo, prohibits wartime shipment of "arms and ammunition," but repeals restrictions on trade in "implements of war." From the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, or later from the Senate, the Administration hopes to win further modification, if not complete repeal, of the embargo.

Impasse Predicted

Despite leadership forecasts of action this session, some members of the Senate mandatory neutrality bloc pointed to the wide divergence of views in the Senate committee and predicted an impasse.

"It will be impossible, in my judgment, to get a majority for any neutrality bill in that committee," said Senator Clark (Democrat), of Missouri, "not even for a motion to report it without recommendation."

Pittman insisted, "We will stay for a vote on neutrality."

Asked if Senators weary of long sessions might not leave Washington if action is delayed too long, Pittman said, "We can arrest them." The Senate has power through its sergeant-at-arms to compel attendance of members.

In the absence of Pittman, Senator Harrison (Democrat), Missis-

43-39 Vote Revives Act Killed Friday By G.O.P. Filibuster; Legality Questioned

Money Bill Roll Call, Page 6.

By Robert C. Albright

The President recaptured monetary powers four days lapsed and silverites gained virtual remonetization of silver when the Senate yesterday approved, by a 43-to-39 vote, the Administration's money bill conference agreement.

Republicans vehemently protested the legality of the action, which extended currency powers already expired, but conceded it would be difficult to carry a test case to the courts.

Armed with an opinion by the Attorney General, and another yesterday by the general counsel of the Treasury, the Administration determined to proceed with its revived currency weapons as if they had not lapsed Friday night.

President's Power Restored

The narrow Administration victory in the Senate restored the President's power further to devalue the dollar, re-established the $2,000,000,000 stabilization fund, increased the Treasury's domestic silver purchase price from 64.64 cents an ounce to 71.1, and restored Treasury authority to buy foreign silver.

The old law which died in a Senate Republican filibuster Friday night was pumped back to life when 40 Democrats, one Republican (Borah, of Idaho), one Independent (Norris, of Nebraska), and one Progressive (La Follette, of Wisconsin), voted to support the conference agreement.

Nineteen Democrats joined with 18 Republicans and two Farmer-Laborites to loudly shout "No," but their vote fell four short of the number needed to kill the report.

Silverites Split on Compromise

Silverites, who originally demanded and won from the Senate a a 77.57 cent silver price, split sharply on the conference compromise, with Senator Ashurst, of Arizona, and Senator McCarran, of Nevada, leading a last minute bolt from the money agreement.

Republicans, led by Senator Austin, of Vermont, and Senator Taft, of Ohio, contended to the end that a dead law could not be legally "extended" and declared the statute must be administered under a cloud of legal doubt. But they admitted it was another thing to get the case into the courts for a ruling.

"What difference does it make whether it is legal or not," said Senator Adams, Colorado Democrat, who led the fight against the conference agreement. "They are going ahead with it. The Supreme Court has said a citizen can't raise the question in the courts unless he can show damage."

Senate Majority Leader Barkley expressed doubt that any legal test of the validity of yesterday's action can be made unless the President orders further devalution of the dollar. In that case, as under the original devaluation order, damage suits might be filed testing the law, he said.

Insists Action Is Legal

But Barkley reaffirmed his belief that the action was legal, and filed with the Senate an opinion by General Counsel Foley, of the Treasury, declaring it was clearly the intent of Congress to revive the statute and defending in detail the right to restore the $2,000,000,000 stabilization fund.

Answering Republican arguments that the huge sum reverted to the general fund of the Treasury with the expiration of the old law, and a new appropriation is needed, the opinion argued that the money is still held on deposit with the Treasurer of the United States, and has never gone back to the Treasury.

"Since the moneys in the fund are not 'in the Treasury'," said the opin-

Boy, Grandmother Saved From Room Filled With Gas

A 10-year-old boy and his grandmother were rescued from their apartment at 1754 Lanier place northwest, yesterday after gas from a refrigeration system permeated the rooms, blocking the corridors.

Occupants of the lower floors left the building without ill effect, but Mrs. Gladys Dance, 50, and Randolph Watson were trapped on the top floor.

Firemen from No. 9 Truck Company, across the street, ran over with an extension ladder and pulled Randolph to safety. Mrs. Dance climbed down unassisted.

'Blood Bank,' 4 Months Old, Proves Real Success Here

Children's Hospital yesterday reported that its "blood bank," which is four months old today, is an unqualified success, to which many boys and girls may owe their lives.

Miss Mattie Gibson, superintendent; Dr. E. Clarence Rice, pathologist, and Dr. J. F. Raffetto, chief resident, joined in praise of the innovation, which provides for cold storage of transfusion blood which is available on a few minutes notice.

They produced records showing that 218 volunteers have submitted to "deposits" since the first was received on March 6 and approximately 500 patients have been benefited. More than one child's life has been saved, it is believed, because a supply of transfusion blood was available at all times.

"That first donor was especially welcome and useful," said Dr. Rice. "The 300 cubic centimeters (about a pint) which we took from him was used for six transfusions, administered to two patients."

Drs. Rice and Raffetto told of the case of a young girl who suffered a kidney rupture in an accident. Rushed to the hospital, she was taken directly to the operating room. Due to internal hemorrhaging and shock, an immediate transfusion was vital, yet it was equally urgent to operate promptly.

Under pre-blood bank conditions, it would have been necessary to send out calls for donors, test volunteers and perhaps reject a half dozen or more before the right blood type was found—if it was found.

In that case, the surgeon would face this dilemma: Should he begin the operation without waiting for a transfusion, despite doubt that the patient could survive the knife, or

OF THEE I SING: The unsung heroes of 1939 are the insurance salesmen. On one side they're harassed by the Monopoly Committee investigation of insurance, the threat of life policies sold at banks. On the other, they battle against their bosses' contention that salesmen are not employes, because they work on commission, and must be ineligible for social security pensions.

In the face of this you can't help but admire their pluck. They still go about jovially calling on their prospects, with affability and badinage, waiting until an opening occurs for ambushing you with some disguised form of the question: "Who'll take care of you when you're decrepit, or of your family when you're dead?"

It's a question they must be asking themselves, too.

CAPITAL CAVIAR: My nominee for the archtype of feminine charm in officialdom: Lucille McMillin, one of the Civil Service Commissioners . . . She could make Senators Tydings and Minton laugh at the same joke. It takes about ten times as much charm and personality for a woman to get and hold a high Government job as either Broadway or Hollywood demands; and ten times as much as a man needs.

An advocate of admitting 20,000 refugee children from Germany was arguing with a Congressman firmly opposed. "Well," he said finally, "when Attorney General Murphy abandons Alcatraz Prison, why don't you let these children in to live there? They'll be vastly better off."

GILT OFF THE DOME: Only 13 of the 96 Senators have served 20 years or more, and only 26 have served two full 6-year terms . . . Sixty-seven Senators have served under 10 years, and 43 under five years. Two Senators, Borah and Cotton Ed Smith, have served over 30 years and have probably received over a half million dollars each in salary, travel expenses, clerk hire and free hair cuts. But it takes a genius to last 30 years on the Hill.

One of the politer names used by the Loyal Opposition for the new 3.8 billion lend-and-spend bill is "Presidential Pork Barrel."

"They've just moved the pork barrel over to the White House end of the Avenue," says a Member who is opposed to it but thinks he'll have to vote for it.

One advantage of presidential pork-barrel is that Congressmen can also dip into it for juicy pork, while a President can't get a smell of ordinary congressional pork barrel.

The Nazis launched a false story of depravity against Baron von Cramm, the tennis champ, in revenge for a mild wisecrack about Hitler made two years ago at a San Francisco party; prison and exile followed. Now they're short a tennis star.

POTOMAC CHATTER: Among some New Dealers, oddly enough, Justice Harlan Stone, a Republican, is mentioned with Robert Jackson, the Solicitor General, as likeliest successors to Chief Justice Hughes, should he retire. They say if the post had been vacant three years ago Stone would have been a cinch for the job . . .

When Poet Arch McLeish was nominated for Librarian of Congress, it was embarrassing that he had once written and edited an article kidding some Senators gently who had later to confirm or disapprove him. Something like Kipling's unflattering allusion to Queen Victoria which prevented him from being poet laureate of England. But MacLeish gave the Senators many more compliments than sneers in the same piece. Maybe that saved his hide.

AAA Used To Get Votes, Says Wiley

Like WPA, He Charges As Congress Splits On Hatch Bill

By the Associated Press

A Republican charge Administration forces were attempting to convert the AAA into a political agency for the 1940 campaign, enlivened yesterday Congressional controversy over the Hatch bill to curb political activities of Federal officials.

Asserting he had "definite and certain information" Democratic politicians were utilizing the Farm Administration setup for political purposes, Senator Wiley (Republican), of Wisconsin, added:

"Perhaps that is why the Hatch bill is having so much trouble in the other house."

House Modifies Bill

The bill, passed by the Senate earlier in the session, was approved last week by the House Judiciary Committee, which eliminated a section forbidding such Federal officials as district attorneys and tax collectors to act as political campaign managers for any candidate.

Senator Hatch (Democrat), of New Mexico, author of the measure, told the Senate Friday this action by the House committee had "emasculated" the bill.

Wiley charged that when it became apparent the House committee contemplated action, "telephones began to jangle on Capitol Hill."

Michelson Criticized

"We know," he shouted, "that the versatile and watchful Charles Michelson (publicity director for the Democratic National Committee) and others stepped into the breach."

"I am here to say that figures will be obtained to show that in the month of June emissaries went forth and started to do to AAA that which was done to the WPA in many sections of this country in the last election."

Earlier Representative Michener (Republican), of Michigan, told reporters that when the bill comes before the House, probably next week, he would offer an amendment which would restore the provision deleted in the House Committee.

Dempsey Plans Changes

Representative Dempsey (Democrat), of New Mexico, said he would propose two amendments:

1. Exempt the President, Vice President and members of Congress and their staffs.

2. Restore the provision forbidding administrative officers to engage in "political management or political campaign."

Dempsey said Congressmen and their aides should not be subject to the ban because "we're elected representatives—not appointive."

He said he would insist on the other change "because we don't want Federal attorneys, for instance, going about in a campaign with a pocket full of indictments."

sippi, presided at yesterday's Foreign Relations Committee meeting. Harrison, who is chairman of the Finance Committee, pointed to the imminence of action on the Administration's social security amendments before his Finance Committee and proposed the three-day neutrality delay.

Hull Backed by Roosevelt

Secretary of State Hull, backed to the limit by the President, originally recommended complete repeal of the mandatory arms embargo and authority for the President to regulate American travel through combat zones fixed by him. The latter provision was sacrificed by House leaders in an effort to win embargo repeal. On the House show-down, they were reversed on the embargo as well. The House substituted a ban on "lethal" weapons, which conceivably might permit shipment of planes, but would prohibit wartime export of guns and ammunition.

A half-dozen other proposed revisions are pending before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, ranging from Chairman Pittman's cash-and-carry embargo repeal measure, and the Gillette "trade-at-your-own risk" bill, to the Nye-Bone-Clark mandatory neutrality blocs insistence on an absolute prohibition against all war implement shipments. Informal polls of the committee to date have failed to disclose a majority for any one plan but by obtaining committee votes on every pending proposal leaders hope to salvage a bill satisfactory to the Administration.

Passage yesterady of his monetary bill and clearance of most July 1 "deadline" measures requiring his signature, left the President free to make the Western tour he has long planned, leaving Congress at work on neutrality as the key to adjournment. Reports persisted yesterday the President might carry to the country his neutrality stand, contending as he did Tuesday at Hyde Park that America can best keep out of war under the Administration's neutrality program.

On the House sidelines of the neutrality issue, now up to the Senate, Representative Bloom, of New York, acting chairman of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, voiced belief the House would approve arms embargo repeal if it is voted by the Senate.

But Representative Fish (Republican), of New York, who led the House Republican fight on the measure, called the original measure "a dead cock in the pit."

U. S. Finds System to Clothe Children by Size, Not Age

Makers Interested in Standards for Which 150,000 Were Measured

After two years of measuring, in which 150,000 boys and girls were participants, the United States Bureau of Home Economics believes it has the answer to how to make clothes to fit children.

They report that manufacturers are writing in for the figures, and Ruth O'Brien, under whose direction the new sizing system was worked out, is being asked to give some what-to-do-next lectures. The object is to have boys and girls fitted according to their measurements, and not haphazardly in accordance with their ages.

In the range from 4 to 17 years, the Bureau of Home Economics reports 13 regular and 26 auxiliary sizes for boys, and 12 regular and 24 auxiliary sizes for girls. Manufacturers' mannikins and home patterns will be standardized accordingly.

Norris to Ask Hearings on Urban Co-ops

Bill Would Extend Benefits Enjoyed by Farm Organizations

By Felix Cotten

Senator Norris (Independent), Nebraska, revealed yesterday that he would ask for hearings at this session of Congress on a bill introduced by him extending to urban manufacturing, retail and service co-operatives the credit facilities allowed by the Government to farm co-operatives.

Meanwhile, it appeared that some of the leading farm organizations had grown skeptical toward the proposal, which would greatly stimulate the consumer co-operative movement throughout the country.

The bill is before the Senate Agriculture Committee. Norris doubted whether there would be any action on it at this session. He plans, however, to have it referred to a subcommittee for hearings.

"I want to give everybody," he said, "an opportunity to be heard, and thus find out whether there is any opposition to it."

Norris indicated that certain consumer organizations probably would support the bill. The Co-operative League of the United States, with headquarters in Chicago, is interested in the proposal.

The bill would encourage small town or city folk to set up co-operative retail stores, factories, service establishments or other enterprises. Provided more than half their membership were farmers, they could obtain credit from the Government on the same terms as farm co-operatives.

Loans at Low Interest

The Government's 13 banks for co-operatives would make long-term capital loans to them at 4 per cent, working capital loans at 2½ per cent, and commodity loans at 1½ per cent.

They would be in competition, of course, with existing enterprises. This would be another jolt to small business, which is complaining about having to pay "loan sharks" from 18 to 35 per cent for working capital loans.

Much more important than Government loans at low interest rates, however, would be the advantage which the new co-operative organizations would derive if, as a result of legal recognition by the Federal Government, they could obtain the tax-exemption privileges which various States grant farm co-operatives.

If the Norris bill is passed, it is reported a drive will be made on State legislatures to secure enactment of tax exemption privileges for consumer co-operatives organized under the plan.

It should be made clear, of course, that if a factory, store, service establishment, hospital or other organization were formed under terms of the bill, it would be for the purpose of furnishing goods or services to consumer members on a nonprofit basis.

Although only 49 per cent of the voting members could live in small towns or cities, the organization still could supply nonmembers in an amount equal to what it supplied members. Thus only one-fourth of the goods or services would have to be supplied to farmers.

Some farm leaders, it is understood, feel that, if enacted, the proposal might endanger the whole system of benefits to farm co-operatives.

Organizers of a co-operative would have to put up a certain amount of capital before they could borrow from a Government bank for co-operatives. The promoters would issue preferred stock to themselves, which would pay up to 8 per cent before consumer members received any part of the profits.

The organizers could tie up with an existing farm co-operative, or go out and sign up their membership. But they would have the advantage of a large established clientele.

McNutt to Take Stump 6 Times This Summer

Presidential Candidate To Speak Tomorrow At Charlottesville

By the Associated Press

Indianapolis, July 5.—Philippine High Commissioner Paul V. McNutt, candidate for the Democratic nomination for President, said today before leaving for Washington he had accepted six speaking engagements throughout the country this summer.

Friday at Charlottesville, Va., he will speak before the Institute of Public Opinion. On July 11 he will make an off-the-record talk before the National Press Club in Washington.

He will discuss "Christianity in the Orient" at the Foundry Methodist Church in Washington July 9 and address the Wisconsin State Teachers Association July 17 at Oshkosh.

The former Hoosier Governor will speak at the Indiana American Legion convention in August at Bloomington. At one time McNutt was the legion's national commander.

A promise of more than a year's standing will be fulfilled at Pittsburgh August 11, when McNutt addresses the national convention of the Young Democrats of America.

McNutt expressed belief he would "be in Washington at least a month." He said he had "no definite information" when he would confer with President Roosevelt on Philippine problems.

McNutt is expected to resign as high commissioner, a post he has held since April, 1937, after completing numerous details in connection with the commissionership.

Farmers, Workers Called Victims of Textile Pay Plan

Atlanta, July 5 (AP).—Southern cotton farmers and textile workers were called today by the Southern States Industrial Council potential "victims" of a proposed 32½ cents an hour textile wage minimum.

A special committee of the council asserted the wage minimum, if in effect, would wreck many small mills and throw their workers back on the farm to aggravate agriculture's already serious problems.

The report of the committee was read by Chairman C. C. Sheppard, of Clarks, La., at a hearing before Wage-Hour Administrator Andrews in the council's opposition to the proposed minimum.

NLRB Probe Termed Attack On New Deal

Rep. Ramspeck Holds Action Designed to Cripple the Board

The proposed investigation of the National Labor Relations Board is intended to "smear the New Deal" and "destroy the labor act," a conservative Southern member of the House Labor Committee charged yesterday.

Representative Ramspeck (Democrat), of Georgia, ranking member of the committee in the absence of Chairman Norton, said "I have no objections to an investigation; but under the circumstances it seems to me that this one is designed to cripple the Labor Board."

The bill calling for the inquiry, scheduled to come up in the House next week, will probably pass, said Ramspeck. "It's rare for the House to refuse an investigation," he commented, "and rarer still for one to prove anything."

Whitney Attacks Investigation

At the same time, A. F. Whitney, president of the powerful Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, said he had written members of Congress that the proposed investigation "is intended primarily as a 'witch-hunt' to embarrass the board and further aggravate employer-employe relations."

The Labor Committee of the House is in its third month and the corresponding committee of the Senate is nearing its fourth month of hearings on proposed amendments to the labor relations act.

Hearings to Last Two Weeks More

Representative Ramspeck said yesterday he expected the House hearings would last another two weeks and that he hoped the committee would be able to report out some amendments to the act before adjournment.

However, Senator Ellender (Democrat), of Louisiana, a member of the Senate committee, asserted no Senate action would be taken this session.

"We have 69 more witnesses," he said, "and we hope to hear them all."

"In fact," he added, "I would like to give the Labor Board a chance to clean its own house—on the basis of the testimony that has come before us."

At hearings yesterday, the Senate committee heard a spokesman for independent labor unions attack the law, and a representative of the National Religion and Labor Foundation, of New Haven, Conn., defend it.

Act Attacked, Defended

Reginald B. Naugle, of Philadelphia, president of the American Independent Unions, Inc., said that if the act is amended and the board dismissed, business will bring about recovery within six months, giving employment to all who want to work on permanent jobs."

The labor act "is the greatest piece of social legislation we have in this country," declared the Rev. William B. Waltmire, Chicago Methodist pastor, representing the Religion and Labor Foundation.

Meanwhile, another battle was brewing in the House over proposed amendments to the wage-hours act. Representative Barden (Democrat), of North Carolina, champion of total agricultural exemptions, said yesterday he had almost completed a proposed amendment to the law exempting many agricultural processes, including canning of fresh fruit and vegetables.

U. S. to Colonize Grand Coulee Area

Secretary of Interior Ickes announced yesterday the Bureau of Reclamation will undertake a program to settle and develop an area of 1,200,000 acres, to be irrigated by the Grand Coulee Dam, in the State of Washington.

He declared Harlan H. Barrows, chairman of the Department of Geography at the University of Chicago and a member of the Water Resources Committee, will direct the development.

Ickes said that if the present rate of construction is maintained, the dam—under construction since 1933—will be completed in little more than two years.

Senator Burke Recommends Muzzle for Guffey Following His '3d Term' Radio Talk

By the Associated Press

Senator Burke (Democrat), of Nebraska, remarked yesterday that the radio speech of Senator Guffey (Democrat), of Pennsylvania, urging a third term for President Roosevelt, was so bad the President's friends ought to "put a muzzle" on Guffey.

SEN. BURKE

Guffey mentioned Burke by name in his Monday night speech, saying the Nebraskan "waltzed" into office as a New Dealer and then deserted the President.

"Looking at it in an unbiased manner, as far as it is possible to do so," said Burke in an interview, "I thought it was about the poorest radio address I have ever heard, both as to delivery and content."

Representative Jessie Sumner (Republican), of Illinois, in condemning Government spending, said:

"The difference between a liberal and a conservative is:

"The conservatives are the 'whys'; the liberals are the 'why-nots'."

The House sent to the White House yesterday a bill authorizing Maj. Andrew S. Rowan, retired, who delivered the famous "Message to Garcia" during the Spanish-American War 40 years ago, to accept a decoration from the Cuban government for the act.

Rowan's feat in delivering a message from President McKinley to Gen. Garcia in Cuba in 1898 was a nationally acclaimed event of the Spanish War. Rowan now lives in San Francisco.

The Senate Military Affairs Committee approved a bill to give round-trip mileage to two employes of each Senator and Representative for each session of Congress.

President Roosevelt asked Congress yesterday to appropriate an additional $102,000 for salaries and expenses of the Securities Commission for the current fiscal year.

The original $5,300,000 SEC appropriation, a Budget Bureau memorandum explained, will be inadequate because of the necessity of opening a foreign office, making further studies of investment trusts and investment companies, and regulating over-the-counter markets "as a result of the failure on the part of the associations of investment bankers, brokers and dealers to attempt self-regulation . . ."

Representative Schafer (Republican), of Wisconsin, offered to support Mrs. Harry Griswold if she became a candidate for the House of Representatives to succeed her husband who died suddenly Tuesday.

"I have heard a number of members say it would be ideal for her to run and carry on his work," Schafer said.

He added that Mrs. Griswold was too shocked by yesterday's tragedy to consider such a possibility now.

A Federal Commission, with a $250,000 fund was authorized in a bill passed by the House, as an agency to participate in celebration next year of the 400th anniversary of the Coronado Spanish Expedition to be held by southwestern states. The Senate has approved the measure.

The House passed a State Department-requested bill authorizing appointment of a commissioner to adjudicate claims of Americans against the Soviet Government. The legislation was asked by State department officials to aid in pressing Russia for compliance with her agreement to settle all American claims.

House Clears Record of Hero

By the Associated Press

The House passed and sent to the Senate yesterday a bill to grant the late Capt. Charles G. Clement, of Georgia an honorable discharge from the Army.

Clement was court-martialed during the war on a charge of drunkenness while on duty. Later, he enlisted as a private, and was killed in action. He was cited for "extraordinary bravery and coolness."

Approving the bill to remove from his war record the conviction by a military court, the House Military Affairs Committee said:

"After his re-enlistment as a private in his own regiment, he continued to be addressed as "captain" and when his death in action was reported, his commanding officer said: 'God give us more captains like Clement.' This committee reverently joins in that prayer."

Santo Domingo 'Strong Man' to Arrive Today

Military Honors Await Unofficial Visit Here Of Gen. Trujillo

The "strong man" of Santo Domingo will arrive here this morning for a round of visits to military posts calculated to draw his West Indian state more closely into incipent plans for joint hemisphere defense.

Gen. Rafael Leonidas Trujillo Molina—"Caesar of the Caribbean"—is visiting the United States "unofficially," and will receive none of the honors reserved for official visits of foreign dignitaries. No longer President of the Dominican Republic, though still holding the reins as leader of its only permitted political party, he is taking his first trip outside his native land as a private citizen.

As commander of the Dominican army, however, Generalissimo Trujillo will be feted by American defense leaders. A Marine Corps guard of honor will be at the Union Station with representatives of the State, War and Navy departments to greet him at 11:30 a. m. today.

Troops from the local Marine Barracks, Fort George G. Meade, Md., and the Marine Quantico Base will stage reviews and parades for the visitor. Formal dinners and luncheons also have been arranged by Army and Marine leaders.

May Tour Country

It is expected that the generalissimo will call on President Roosevelt and Secretary of State Hull during his five-day stay here. Leaving Washington, he will visit West Point, the New York World's Fair and probably will tour the United States before sailing for Europe. In France Senora Trujillo awaits him with a new-born son.

Four squads of Marines and a drum and bugle corps will welcome Trujillo at the station with march music appropriate for a former chief of a state. After driving to the Legation, where he will stay during his visit, the Dominican leader will visit Mount Vernon. Returning, he will follow the schedule of the British King and Queen, stopping at the CCC camp at Fort Hunt, and then placing a wreath on the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier at Arlington Cemetery.

Tomorrow, Trujillo will visit the Marine Barracks at Eighth and I streets southeast, where a parade will be held in his honor and he will inspect the post. Afterward, Maj. Gen. Thomas Holcomb, commandant of Marines, will give a dinner for the visitor in his quarters at the barracks.

The Army will stage a review for the Dominican general at Fort Meade at 10 a. m. Saturday. That evening Minister Pastoriza will give a reception for him at the Legation. On Monday, the visitor will go to Quantico, Va., for an inspection of the Marine base and a parade and review, and luncheon as the guest of Maj. Gen. James C. Breckinridge, his former commanding officer.

Monday night Gen. George C. Marshall, acting Chief of Staff of the American Army, will entertain at dinner for Gen. Trujillo. He will visit West Point July 12 and Army headquarters at Governors Island, N. Y., the following day.

Marines Lead in Fete

The Marines are taking a leading part in the entertainment for Gen. Trujillo, for it was during their occupation of the island republic that he rose to high position in the army. Starting as a sergeant in the Dominican National Guard, then officered mostly by American Marines, he was promoted rapidly, and made its commandant when the United States forces were withdrawn in 1924.

Gen. Trujillo's dominion is not a large or wealthy state, but it is strategically of importance because of its location at the approaches of the Panama Canal. Exiles from the iron Trujillo rule contend he is flirting with Berlin and Rome, specifically charging that the Reich is negotiating with the republic for a submarine fueling station. Officials here say, however, there is no reason to believe the totalitarians have had any success in weaning the nation from its normally close ties with the United States.

Recognizing the increased importance of the West Indies to the defense of the Canal, the Army recently organized a Military Department of the Caribbean, with headquarters in Puerto Rico, next door to Santo Domingo.

Two Washington High Masons to Assist In Installation Rites for Duke of Kent

King George's Brother Named Grand Master Of Mother Lodge

Three Washingtonians, high in Masonic rank, will sail from New York today for England to participate in the installation of the Duke of Kent, younger brother of George VI, as grand master of the Mother Grand Lodge of Masons of the World.

The ceremonies will be held in London, beginning July 19 and lasting about four days. Representing the Grand Lodge of the District of Columbia will be J. Claude Keiper, past grand master and now grand secretary of the Grand Lodge of the District, and L. P. Steuart, past grand master and now treasurer of the Imperial Council, Mystic Shrine. John H. Cowles, past grand master of the Grand Lodge of Kentucky and now grand commander of the Supreme Council of the 33rd Degree Masons, will represent the Kentucky Grand Lodge.

The British royal family, it was stated yesterday, has long been interested in Masonry and the British grand masters for years were of the royal household. The Prince of Wales, afterward Edward VII, was grand master for 25 years and upon his ascension to the throne he resigned the Masonic office and became the patron of Freemasonry in England.

His younger brother, the Duke of Connaught, succeeded him as grand master. The duke retired this year after 39 years' of service in the position and at the age of 89. Upon his resignation the Duke of Kent was elected grand master of the Grand Lodge of England. The invitation to the American Masonic representatives is in accordance with custom.

Many grand lodges of the United States will be represented at the ceremonies for the duke this month. The party from the District Grand Lodge and Cowles will return from England on July 27.

Harrington to Revamp WPA, Rejoin Army

Revelation Comes as He Tackles Job of Reorganizing Setup

By Cecil B. Dickson,
International News Service Staff Writer.

Col. Francis C. Harrington is slated to relinquish his post as Works Progress Administrator and return to active Army service a few months after putting the new relief program into effect.

High War Department officials disclosed yesterday that Harrington will be recalled to continue his military career upon ending a four-year tour of duty with the WPA on January 8, 1940.

This revelation came as Harrington tackled the job of revising the WPA setup to meet rigid requirements laid down in the $1,755,600,000 relief act, effective last Saturday.

A slash of 2,000 from the relief rolls was ordered by Harrington in fixing the July quota at 2,400,000, compared with the May-June average of 2,600,000. About 115,000 relievers will be shifted to the National Youth Administration, which received increased funds for the current fiscal year while the WPA was cut to $1,477,000,000, compared with $2,250,000,000 in the 12-month period ended June 30.

Urges Drive For Trade

The relief picture also was highlighted by:

Appearance of Mayor LaGuardia of New York, who urged Congress to place orders for $1,500,000,000 worth of goods with private industry to be sold in South American and Far Eastern markets to drive out trade of dictator nations.

President Roosevelt's reappointment of Aubrey Williams, former Assistant WPA Administrator, as National Youth Administrator.

Transfer of 33,000 reliefs in the abolished Federal Theater and arts projects to other projects.

Steps taken by John M. Carmody to assume his new job as Federal Works administrator, under whom the WPA, PWA, Public Roads Bureau, U. S. Housing Authority and similar construction agencies, were merged by the President's Government reorganization order.

LaGuardia offered a four-point program to the House Ways and Means Committee to reduce unemployment, which, besides the foreign trade angle, called for a tightening up of the wage-hour law to spread work, broadening of unemployment insurance aid and uniform State enforcement of child labor laws.

Return May Be Delayed

Col. Harrington's return to the Army may be withheld by President Roosevelt temporarily, but his friends said the officer preferred to return to his military status as soon as possible. Harrington's military career includes the Army's finest training. Besides graduating from West Point, General Staff and the Army War colleges he was sent to the Ecole Superieure de Guerre in Paris, France.

Thousands Quit WPA in Strike Over Longer Hours at Same Pay

Officals Expect Many to Return to Work, Despite Mass Protests, as Replacements Are Called to Keep Construction Going

By the Associated Press

Thousands of WPA construction workers quit their jobs yesterday in a rapidly spreading mass protest against longer working hours imposed by the new Federal relief act, though many were expected to return to work later.

To keep within the appropriations of the new act, meanwhile, WPA pay rolls for July were cut 200,000 below the 2,600,000 figure for June, Washington announced.

Officials in New York City said they expected 5,000 to 10,000 men, mostly nonrelief workers, to leave the WPA rolls permanently because of new working schedules, which had the effect of abolishing union pay scales on construction projects.

Replacements on Job

Nevertheless, Lieut. Col. Brehon Somervell, New York City WPA administrator, who took immediate steps to replace striking workers, said "95 per cent of our projects are going full blast," though President Thomas Murray, of the Building Trades and Construction Council, asserted 90 per cent of WPA skilled workers had quit.

In St. Paul, WPA officials announced, after 800 abandoned a building project at the Minnesota State Fair Grounds, they would close all projects where workers strike. At Akron, Ohio, 700 workers went on a one-day protest strike.

Requisitioning 4,000 mechanics from the Home Relief Bureau as replacements, Somervill also announced striking teachers would be replaced tomorrow and the relief certificates of 17 dentists would be revoked.

Approximately 2,200 Wisconsin workers quit. Among them were 1,300 in Milwaukee and 900 in Winnebago County. Eight hundred alone dropped their tools on a project to widen and deepen the Milwaukee River. The project was shut down temporarily to avoid any possible violence, though the WPA director said 800 others were willing to continue.

More than 1,000 workers were estimated to have halted operations in Rochester, N. Y., and were circulating petitions to their Congressmen. One official said he expected the men to return today.

At Decatur, Ill., 37 skilled workers walked out on a high school annex project. Unskilled laborers continued construction. Forty-eight men on a swimming pool in Chester, Ill., stopped work and 1,100 in Perry County, Ill., left their jobs.

Approximately 300 highway workers struck at Coshocton, Ohio. Projects at Fort Dodge, Iowa, were brought to a standstill, with about 200 men idle. In most other large Iowa cities workers made no protest.

Protest meetings assembled in New York. At least one group appointed a complaint committee, and many men went to City Hall and WPA offices to obtain information.

Unions Not Active

Unions took no formal action, though some individual workers declared the Government was threatening union wage scales in private industry by reducing hourly wages.

General effect of orders posted on WPA bulletin boards was to require employes to work longer hours for approximately the same rates of pay. Working hours were set at 130 per month, as compared with 60 to 80 previously.

Wage scales in New York ranged from $55.20 for a four-week fiscal period for unskilled labor to $90 for professional workers. Notices warned New York workers that "it will be necessary to discharge any employe who refuses to work under these conditions," so a prolonged strike was not expected.

Ballet to Perform 4 Original Dances

Four new dances created by the Washington Civic Ballet will be performed at 8 p. m. today at the Sylvan Theater in the Washington Monument grounds, in a joint program with the Washington Civic Orchestra, directed by Dr. Kurt Hetzel.

Highlight of the evening will be a two-scene farce, "Snatched From a Fate Worse Than Death," performed by the entire company of 30 local dancers, under the direction of Mrs. Elizabeth Giles.

Flemming Confirmed For Merit Commission

The Senate yesterday confirmed the nomination of Arthur S. Flemming as a member of the Civil Service Commission. Flemming, a professor at American University, will succeed Samuel H. Ordway, jr., who resigned.

800 CIO Tool, Die Men Strike At Fisher Plant

May Cause Layoff Of 100,000; U. S. Sends Conciliator Dewey

By the Associated Press

Detroit, July 5.—The C. I. O. United Automobile Workers, balked in an attempt to negotiate with General Motors Corp. on demands relating to tool and die, engineering and maintenance employes, called 800 of those workers from their jobs in Fisher Body Plant No. 21 here today, inaugurating a strike which G. M. officials said could cause idleness for 100,000 production employes.

Walter P. Reuther, director of the union's General Motors department, said the strike "will be spread to other G. M. plants as the situation requires . . . to make the strike effective."

The U. S. Conciliation Service, offering its aid in averting an extensive tieup, sent Commissioner James F. Dewey to Detroit from Washington.

Corporation officials terminated a three-hour conference with union representatives Sunday, announcing their refusal to "take sides" with the U. A. W.-C. I. O. against A. F. of L. U. A. W. led by Homer Martin.

R. J. Thomas, president of the U. A. W.-C. I. O., charged the corporation with "bad faith" and claimed for his union a majority of the 8,000 men employed by G. M. in tool and die, engineering and maintenance work.

C. I. O. union demands included wage increases of "at least 10 cents an hour," uniform minimum hiring rates, standard apprentice setup in all G. M. plants, and overtime provisions for Saturdays, Sundays and holidays.

The corporation has asked the National Labor Relations Board to determine with which union it should deal.

Hoover Visions War In Roosevelt Policy

Chicago, July 5 (INS).—Former President Herbert Hoover charged in a radio address from Chicago tonight that President Roosevelt's foreign policy tends to drag America into an inevitable European war.

Asserting that "Europe is again engaged in a hideous conflict for power," Mr. Hoover said:

"When we talk of using force of any kind, we are playing power politics at the European chess table. And our stakes are the lives of millions of sons of America. The stakes are another 25 years of hideous national impoverishment. The stakes are the progress of all mankind for half a century."

Rep. Keller Appoints 2 to Find Which Dust Is Really Columbus

Historians Couldn't Agree in 60 Years, But Congress Must Have Answer Because It's Been Asked to Buy Relics

Representative Kent E. Keller had turned his "investigators" loose yesterday to "settle for all time" the question of what are the mortal remains of Christopher Columbus and who has them.

If the investigators succeed—if they determine finally that the remains of Columbus are in one of three places, Seville, Havana or Santo Domingo—they will have accomplished what more than 60 years of research have failed to establish.

Representative Keller is constrained to put historians right in the matter because, as chairman of the House Library Committee, he has before him a bill to pay not more than $50,000 for a locket and crucifix said to contain a portion of the dust and bones of Columbus.

Two to Investigate

The bill was introduced by Representative Jennings Randolph (Dmocrat), of West Virginia, in whose district reside the owner of the locket and the crucifix, Mrs. Laura Butler Treadwell, and a leading proponent of the authenticity of the relics, Leroy Romanoff, of Shepherdstown.

One of the "investigators," Keller revealed, is Romanoff. The other, he said, is the Library Committee clerk, Grace K. Cooper.

Kelller said he felt the proposition to be a "good thing," both because of the historical controversy it revives and because of "our good friend from West Virginia."

Randolph's bill would purchase the relics for the Library of Congress, but there was some question about the library wanting them. As evidence of the library's lack of interest, the testimony during committee hearings on the bill of Martin A. Roberts, chief assistant librarian, was cited:

Barden Gets No Kick

Several members of the committee have evidenced skepticism about the appropriateness of the purchase. These included Representative Graham A. Barden (Democrat), of North Carolina, who remarked:

"I certainly think we can spend $50,000 for something that will be worth more to the poor people of this country than a couple of relics. I saw the locket and the crucifix. I held them in my hand, and I must confess I didn't get much of a kick out of it. I think $50,000 would have felt better."

Representative Barden was reminded of the priceless collection of historic documents given the library by the estate of the late historian, John Boyd Thacher, of which Mrs. Treadwell is an heir. He was told that some had felt that, in view of the generosity of the Thacher heirs, Congress could well afford to pay a good price for the relics.

Barden replied:

"Some of my ancestors gave this country their lives, but I'm not sending the Government a bill for it."

Mrs. Stewart Wills $278,000 to Send Youths to College

Princeton University education for needy District youths will be provided from a $278,000 fund established by the will of Mrs. Mirah R. Stewart, of 1150 Connecticut avenue northwest, whose will was filed in District court for probate yesterday.

The fund will be called the Henry Clay Stewart Fund, in honor of Mrs. Stewart's late husband. The fund will be administered by Princeton trustees, who will use the income to pay tuition, room and board.

Mrs. Stewart died in Baltimore May 29. She made a few bequests to relatives, but these died before she did, leaving the entire estate for scholarships.

Aug. 10 Hearing Set for County Sanitary Bonds

Baltimore, July 5.—The Public Service Commission today set August 10 as the date for a hearing on the Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission's request for permission to float a $600,000 bond issue for sewer and water lines in Montgomery and Prince Georges counties.

The sanitary commission's application states that $163,044 will be spent in Montgomery County and $65,418 in Prince Georges. Of the balance, $171,536 has not been allocated and $200,000 will be used to match PWA construction funds.

The largest single project in the sanitary commission's plans is at Rogers Heights, Prince Georges County, where it is proposed to spend $15,000 for sewer and water connections.

2 Who Fled Alcatraz Reported Seen in Kansas

Garden City, Kans., July 5 (AP).—A county undersheriff's murder opened a search today that may solve one of the riddles of modern crime—whether two convicts swam to freedom in a daring bolt from grim, rocky Alcatraz.

Arrested as a suspect in the fatal shooting of Undersheriff Ray Kumpf at Syracuse, Kans., Earl McGuire told officers he had played poker past Friday night with the two vanished convicts, Ralph Roe, 29, and Theodore Cole, 23.

The two disappeared from the fog-shrouded San Francisco bay prison Dec. 16, 1937. Presumably they attempted to swim more than a mile to shore. No trace of the men ever was found although at the time Warden J. J. Johnston doubted either "would have had a chance of swimming the bay that day."

They were the only men ever to reach the sea in an escape attempt since the island became a Federal prison in 1934.

McNinch Not to Quit FCC, Says Colleagues

Persistent reports and rumors that Federal Communications Commission Chairman Frank R. McNinch will resign, were discounted again yesterday by persons within the Commission who are close to the chairman.

These sources said that McNinch is out of the city and that "if he were here he would probably be too tired of denying the report to say anything."

Japan's Losses In Mongol Fight Reported High

Travelers Say Harbin Hospitals Are Filled With Wounded Soldiers

By the Associated Press.

Shanghai, July 5.—Travelers arriving from Manchukuo said today hospitals in Harbin were "overflowing" with Japanese soldiers wounded in fighting Soviet Russian and Mongolian forces along the border between Manchukuo and Outer Mongolia.

Their reports were the first independent confirmation of the heavy fighting previously reported in Japanese and Russian announcements of large-scale air and land battles under way sporadically since May 11.

Today the Japanese reported their airmen shot down 53 Soviet planes in a "great awe-inspiring battle" involving 150 airplanes. They indicated they suffered no losses in the air engagement.

Soviet Claims Victory

[A Soviet communique in Moscow tonight said, "About 800" Japanese-Manchukuoans were killed and 45 Japanese planes shot down in the last three days. The communique said Mongolian-Soviet forces lost 100 men killed, 200 wounded and nine planes.

[The latest fighting, the Soviet communique said, started Sunday night when Japanese-Manchukuo troops attacked Mongolian-Soviet positions southeast of Lake Bor. Fifty Japanese tanks and 25 Soviet tanks were said to have been destroyed.—Editor's note.]

[The Japanese army in Manchukuo announc 365 enemy planes had been shot down since May 20 in addition to 98 planes destroyed on the ground in a June 27 air raid on the Mongol air base at Tamsk.]

Meanwhile, the Japanese renewed threats of more drastic action against the International Settlement of Kulangsu at Amoy and against Tientsin, where they have blockaded the British and French foreign concessions.

Tientsin Situation Acute

Japanese dispatches from Kulangsu said Japanese authorities had announced they would tighten the isolation of the island and take "other appropriate measures" unless foreign consuls reply soon to the Japanese note of June 29, suggesting resumption of negotiations of Japanese demands for more representation on the municipal council, governing body of the settlement.

The situation at Tientsin remained acute. Domei, the Japanese news agency, quoted Gen. Gen Sugiyama, supreme commander of North China headquarters at Peiping, as stating:

"The traffic restrictions now enforced at Tientsin should never be relaxed, regardless of the British-Japanese talks in Tokyo. These conversations will be meaningless unless they provide a starting point for a new British policy which will abandon assistance to Gen. Chiang Kai-shek and interference with establishment of the new order in East Asia."

Food Bans Tightened

Prohibition of delivery of milk to the foreign concession continued, and a tightening of restrictions accentuated a shortage of other foods, especially fresh vegetables.

Sir Robert Leslie Craigie, British ambassador in Tokyo, opposed Sugiyama's view of the Tokyo conference.

"It is definitely understood," he said, "that the conferences will be confined to local issues connected with present conditions in Tientsin."

Russian Envoy Leaves

Nazis Deny Gloating Over U. S. Embargo

Roosevelt Painting War Ghosts on Wall, Commentator Writes

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, July 5.—A semiofficial Nazi commentary, addressing itself to the people of the United States, said tonight that "the intention of President Roosevelt to line up America in the encirclement front does not lessen the danger of a world war, but, on the contrary, increases it."

Deutsche Dienst, distributed by the official German news agency, gave this reaction to Mr. Roosevelt's comment concerning the action of the United States House of Representatives in writing in a modified arms embargo into the American neutrality law.

(Mr. Roosevelt said the first policy of his Administration was to prevent any war in any part of the world, because anything that can be done to stop was is good. He asserted that press dispatches from four major capitals stating that the House action had been welcomed in Fascist and Nazi nations were substantiated by reports to the State Department.)

Deutsche Dienst said that to maintain Germany welcomed the action was a "biased falsification."

The service added that in making his statements at his Fourth of July press conference the President "perhaps was under pressure of the many exploding firecrackers."

Mr. Roosevelt was painting "war ghosts on the wall," the service said, and "cast suspicion above all on Congressmen as disguised Nazis and culprits for the next world war."

J. P. Morgan Sails For Scotland To Hunt—Maybe

New York, July 5 (AP).—J. P. Morgan, in an affable mood, sailed today aboard the liner Queen Mary for his annual holiday, which he hoped would include a little grouse shooting in Scotland.

"It depends a little on war, in fact a great deal on war," he said. "If they start war, certainly my shooting will be interrupted, because everybody would rush off to do what they'd have to do, and I wouldn't have anybody with me."

Britain Plans To Arm Allies

Poland and Turkey on the other.

Though London and Paris would not object to the conclusion of such a pact, there is some doubt as to whether Warsaw would agree.

In view of the close relations already in existence between Moscow and Ankara, the conclusion of a Turkish-Soviet defensive pact would seem to present fewer obstacles.

The difficulty arises also from Moscow's insistence on a provision in the tri-power alliance pact under which the "voluntary" decision of a guaranteed power, such as Esthonia, to join the Reich could be claimed by the Soviet as a development threatening their "vital interests" and as a signal for Anglo-French military assistance to the Soviet.

Included in the opposition barrage in Commons today were demands that the British fleet be mobilized, and that Chamberlain strengthen his cabinet by the inclusion of Winston Churchill and Anthony Eden.

Chamberlain refused to answer most of the demands. Others he sidestepped.

The most significant statement in the House of Commons on Danzig came from Richard Austen Butler, parliamentary undersecretary of foreign affairs, who asserted that Britain is committed to aid Poland only if there is a "clear threat" to Polish independence.

"I refer questioners to the terms of our pledge to Poland which Great Britain certainly will fulfill," Butler replied to a Laborite questioner.

Attitude Clear

The March 31 pledge as announced by Chamberlain was that Britain would lend all support in its power to Poland "in event of any action which clearly threatened the independence of Poland and which the Polish Government accordingly considered vital to resist with their national forces."

"Could the minister at least say whether, if Poland suffers an act of aggression, all our forces would immediately be put at her disposal?" Butler was asked.

". . . The terms of the guarantee which we gave Poland referred to a very clear threat to her independence," Butler said.

"His Majesty's government will not fail to take any steps which seem necessary or desirable to make its attitude absolutely clear," Chamberlain declared. "This already has been stated with precision in recent speeches by the ministers."

Polish Loan to Danzig

London, July 5 (INS).—A $1,000,000 loan has been granted to Danzig by the Polish government for "harbor improvements," the London Daily Telegraph reported today.

Berlin Warns British, French Not to Crow

Nazis Irked at Report Strong Stand Balked Seizure of Danzig

By the United Press.

Berlin, July 5.—Nazis tonight warned Great Britain and France against attempting to repeat their "cheap triumph" of May, 1938, when it seemed Anglo-French declarations would prevent Germany's absorption of the Czecho-Slovakia Sudetenland.

As in the case of the Sudenteland, they said, Germany's demand for the restoration of Danzig to the Reich "is for us a purely German question and is no cause for war."

Officials and the inspired Nazi press asserted Germany has no aggressive intentions in regard to Danzig, but emphasized that the Free City is German and the British-French "maneuvers of the last week-end" cannot alter the Reich's course.

Nazis are Indignant

Reports abroad, particularly in Paris, that the strong stand of the western powers appeared to have frustrated a Nazi coup in Danzig over the week-end, stirred Nazi indignation. In this connection, the Boersen-Zeitung recalled similar claims in London and Paris when Czecho-Slovakia mobilized army divisions in May, 1938, to resist a threatened German attack.

"It is perhaps fateful for those forgetful people who today do not want to remember the natural reaction which their cheap May triumph created in Germany," the newspeper said.

Britain's View Unchallenged

The Nazi press asserted Germany does not doubt Britain's intention to go to war in support of its anti-aggression obligations to Poland and other states.

Hitherto, Nazi newspapers have taken the stand Britain was neither willing nor able to go to war over the issue of 96 per cent German Danzig.

"There is no doubt that Britain's will is genuine," said the Boersen Zeitung. "We have been pointing out the British will for war for the last three months and we, together with our axis friends, have armed ourselves accordingly.

"Britain confirms encirclement and the will to war against Germany, as well as the will to allow this struggle to become a world war. The camouflage of this brutal will behind humanitarian purposes or protestations of sympathy toward Germany is bluff, but the will itself is not."

Youth Group Assails First Lady in Report

'Betrayed Trust,' Is Committees Charge; Red Schism Widens

By the Associated Press.

New York, July 5.—The 2-day-old Joint Committee for the Defense of American Ideals declared today that Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt had "betrayed the trust placed in her by the youth of the Nation."

The accusation, in a report signed by the committee's chairman, Patrick J. O'Shea, was an outgrowth of the schism in the American Youth Congress, which closed yesterday.

The O'Shea committee is composed of leaders of 21 of the 23 youth organizations which withdrew from the congress in a dispute over Communism.

In a telegram to Mrs. Roosevelt, the committee asked that she join in "a counter-offensive to safeguard American institutions," and asserted the Congress had approved "atheistic communism."

Mrs. Roosevelt, who addressed the Congress Monday night, expressed approval of a creed pledging Congress members to seek progress "only within the framework of the American system of government" and oppose "all forms of dictatorship."

In the meantime, Stephen F. Chadwick, national commander of the American Legion, was quoted in the Boston Post today as saying he was "disturbed" by Mrs. Roosevelt's praise of the Youth Congress, which he said was of "pink complexion."

Jan Bata, Head Of Shoe Combine, On Visit to U. S.

By the Associated Press.

New York, July 5.—Jan Bata, head of the largest shoe manufacturiing combine in the world, arrived from Czecho-Slovakia on the French liner Ile de France today to visit the New York World's Fair and to inspect the first American branch of his company, under construction at Belcamp, Md.

"We bought property for the plant six years ago," he said. "It is hard to say how many will be employed, but 10,000 workers might be about the figure. That will depend upon the management, and upon them also will depend what kind of shoes will be made."

Asked if the Maryland factory would require Maryland financing, Bata said it would, but he was unable to say how much.

Bata indicated his experiences had not been unusual during the Czech crisis last September and the developments of last March.

"At the time of the German occupation of my country I was traveling in Poland," he said. It was true, he explained, that he had been arrested by German officials while crossing the border into Germany a month after the Munich agreement was signed in September, but added that all Czechs had been indexed by the Germans, and that he was released after questioning.

"You Americans don't understand a lot of these matters because you are accustomed to freedom of movement and action," he said. "But in Europe we are disciplined; we are used to it.

Bata said he would return to Czecho-Slovakia after a stay of two weeks in this country. With him are his wife, four daughters and a son, Janik.

accounts and skills in all the latest American industrial techniques. Ask some of the leading engineering firms how they feel about loaing their best tool-makers."

Dr. Auhagen described his remarks as a "funeral oration" on German-American relations, dead because the American people have mistaken "contrasts" between their own way of life and the German for actual "conflicts of interest" between the two nations.

"As a matter of fact" he said, "there are no two major powers in the world whose true national interests clash as little as those of America and Germany."

The contrast between the American and Nazi forms of government, instead of menacing the United States, "has had a stimulating and revitalizing effect on American democracy," he said.

Although Germany "cannot conceivably enforce American conversion to National Socialism," he charged that the United States has placed itself "in the forefront of a movement to overthrow the German government."

The two countries' economies complement one another, Dr. Auhagen maintained, declaring that an exchange of American cotton, oil, lard and fruit for German chemicals, fertilizer, toys and machinery "would go a long way toward rehabilitating the American farmer."

"In supporting Great Britain," the German publicist declared, the United States gives aid and comfort to an empire "whose interests conflict with American interests at almost every point."

America is indulging in "the luxury of conducting her international business on a sentimental basis," he concluded.

Browder said that if "the two strongest nations on earth," Russia and America, "can work together, the prospect for organization of world peace are bright. Otherwise they are very dark."

Peace in Europe is impossible without the active collaboration of the U. S. S. R., he stated, "and the people of France and Britain are forcing the reactionary leaders to see this truth."

Browder warned that "if the Hoover Republicans or Garner Democrats dominate the next Administration, then in all likelihood our country will repeat in all its gruesome details the tortuous course over which Chamberlain has dragged Britain."

Earlier delegates heard from Robert H. Hinckley, chairman of the civil Aeronautics Authority, that American planes "are still the fastest in the world."

The chief problem of American civil aviation, Hinckley told the round table session, is "to develop the research facilities that will keep us far ahead as we are now."

Another C. A. A. member, Edward P. Warner, put the maximum air speed of the near future at about 500 m. p. h. To raise speed from 500 to 600 m. p. h. would be four times as difficult as to lift it from 300 to 500, he explained. The weight of aircraft can be increased to as much as 300,000 pounds, or four times the weight of the transatlantic clipper, he predicted, without radical new developments in plane production.

The most effective altitude for high-speed flight appears to be between 20,000 and 30,000 feet, Warner said, describing as one solution of the problem of "keeping passengers alive and happy at 30,000 feet" the development of equipment to supercharge the entire plane cabin with oxygen.

Dr. Sigmund Neumann, exiled German history professor, in an address before the morning session, presented the European picture in terms of a conflict between generations of widely divergent viewpoint. Overlapping this conflict, he said, is the gap in leadership now felt 21 years after the World War took the lives of 8,000,000 young men.

When the 69-year-old Neville Chamberlain met the war veteran, Adolf Hitler, at Munich, "the late Victorian was confronted with a man 20 years younger, raised in a militant way of life," Dr. Neumann said.

Hitler and the top-ranking Nazi leaders are representatives of a war generation with no roots in political life or thought before 1914, he said, adding that Der Fuehrer, "though born in 1889, had a somewhat retarded development, and did not find himself before the war broke out."

Assassination was listed as one of three steps "which could bring a halt to German aggression and secure peace without a series of new Munichs in a speech by Dr. Oscar Jaszi, former minister for national minorities in the Hungarian government.

The three possible checks to the Nazi drive, according to Dr. Jaszi, are "internal revolutions or tyrannicides; the dismantling of the totalitarian system, returning to an economic and normal normalcy, or an armed coalition sufficiently strong to make war evidently destructive for the dictators."

Brazilian Army Chief Inspects Ford's Factory

Detroit, July 4 (AP).—Maj. Gen. Pedro Aurelio de Goes Monteiro, chief of staff of the Brazilian army, now touring the United States, today received a first-hand glimpse of American industrial mass production methods.

He and members of his staff visited Henry Ford's sprawling River Rouge automobile plant in Dearborn and were guests at a luncheon given by officials of the Ford Motor Co. Ford was reported out of the city.

The army chief expressed great interest in the operations of the highly integrated assembly line.

United States Army officers accompanying the visitor said the general would proceed to Washington tomorrow, canceling a scheduled trip to Boston. The officers said the general would spend three days in Washington, visit the New York World's Fair for four days, then leave for Brazil.

Rise Asked in U. S. Grant for Pensions

Senator Connally, (Democrat), of Texas, offered in the Senate yesterday an amendment to the social security act to increase the Federal contributions for the needy aged.

The amendment calls for a two-thirds contribution by the Federal Government, up to $15 monthly. Above that figure the States would be required to match the Federal contribution dollar for dollar.

Under present law, the Federal Government contributes only as much as a State does.

House to Act On Gallinger Overcrowding

Vreeland Offers Bill To Halt Congestion In Insane Ward

Representative Vreeland (Republican), New Jersey, who six weeks ago introduced a bill which would have junked the District Commission on Mental Health, yesterday offered a substitute measure intended to improve conditions at Gallinger Hospital's psychopathic ward while retaining the lunacy commitment agency.

He will ask the House District Committee, meeting tomorrow, to approve the substitute bill. It favorably reported his original proposal several weeks ago, but Vreeland subsequently withdrew the bill from the House calendar in order to receive suggestions from representatives of the District Bar Association.

"Instead of amending I decided to present a new bill," he declared.

Will Press for Vote

Vreeland, aroused by overcrowding and nonsegregation of violent and quiet patients in the psychopathic ward at Gallinger, is expected to press for a vote on his measure in the House next Monday, District day.

The law he proposes for replacement of the lunacy commitment act which went into effect 13 months ago, he said, would authorize Gallinger Hospital to send directly to St. Elizabeths any patients so disturbed or so ill as to be out of place in the former institution, with its limited facilities.

It would also empower the commission on mental health to send temporaril yto St. Elizabeths persons found to be of unsound mind, pending final adjudication by the court. At present this detention period, during which the patent may exercise his privilege to demand a jury trial, must be spent at Gallinger. Vreeland's bill reduces the period from ten days in length to five.

Amendments Delayed

Meantime, it was learned yesterday that proposed amendments to the existing law, based upon data gathered at hearings held by the Bureau of the Budget, may not be submitted to Congress for several days.

The changes, also aimed at relieving the Gallinger psychopathic ward problem, were approved by the Budget Bureau and other interested Federal agencies last week, but the Budget Bureau has now ordered that the draft be simiplied and condensed before being sent to the Capitol.

Only technically are Vreeland's bill and the budget's plan different from each other in their major points. One would set up a new law while the other would achieve substantially the some end by amending the existing one.

000 for persons on general relief.

Should the board consent to advance the money, it would be used to pay off those under the social security categories. None of the money could be used to pay persons on general relief.

Attending the meeting with Commissioner Allen were Maj. Daniel J. Donovan, District auditor and budget officer, and Otto J. Cass, newly appointed director of relief. Case was sworn into office last Saturday.

District officials insisted there would not be any relief crisis. Surplus foods, they said, were distributed to families last Friday, giving them food for several days.

Distribution will be continued today. By the end of the week, the families will have a supply of flour, beans, raisins, oranges, butter and evaporated milk.

'Hot Beef Stew' Prevents Suicide

New York, July 5 (AP).—The promise of a "delicious steaming-hot plate of beef stew" today lured a man from a precarious perch on the slating roof of his four-story home in Brooklyn.

Police said Elbert Vivian Smith, 33, who had been in poor health, sat for 90 minutes, threatening to leap to the sidewalk 70 feet below. It was his grandmother who finally persuaded Smith to enter the house by urging him to get the beef stew "before it gets cold."

head, after a trip to Morehead, described the situation as "desperate." Kelly said "some looting has already gone on" and "more than 200 houses in Morehead have been either totally or partly destroyed.")

The dreary task of searching for the bodies of flood victims was taken over by enrollees at a CCC camp at nearby Rodburn and scores of volunteers.

From Washington, the Red Cross sent Miss Helen Moses, of the national disaster staff, to take charge of relief.

Representative Bates to Seek Aid

Mayor Warren C. Lappin said "sanitary conditions are the worst possible" in the stricken area and appealed to the Red Cross and Government relief agencies for aid.

(In Washington Representative Bates (Democrat), of Kentucky, said he would seek Federal aid for the flood sufferers as soon as he received a detailed report of the extent of the damage.)

Mrs. N. L. Wells, chairman of the Rowan County Red Cross Chapter, said after a survey of the disaster that the county's death toll might reach 100 persons. Medical supplies and Red Cross nurses arrived here during the afternoon.

Fifty townspeople were sworn in as special deputies and aided in patroling the roped-off downtown section.

The sleeping residents of Morehead had little opportunity to escape the rushing torrents. Fire sirens and factory whistles screamed in the early morning but before many persons could flee the avalanche of water was smashing at their homes.

Postmaster Crutcher estimated "at least" 100 homes were ripped from their foundations.

U.S. Extends Loans On Corn Stored As Collateral

By the Associated Press.

Secretary Wallace announced yesterday farmers having corn stored as collateral for Government price-bolstering loans may apply for a 12-month extension period when the loans fall due August 1.

Farmers now have 257,127,595 bushels stored under 271,315 loans, at the rate of 57 cents a bushel, in the Midwestern corn belt.

Wallace said the purpose of extending the loans was to keep this supply of grain under seal as a reserve supply for use in later years, when a drought mignt cut crops short, and to prevent "wide price and supply fluctuations."

To encourage farmers to hold their corn for the 12-month period, the Government offers to pay them 6 cents a bushel for storage at the end of the extended loan period, provided the market price at that time is less than the loan rate plus storage and carrying charges.

District Attorney Pine announced yesterday that only 67 criminal cases were awaiting trial at the end of the fiscal year, June 30, compared with 110 at the same time last year.

The cases awaiting trial included no housebreakings, of which 471 were disposed of during the year. No bonds were forfeited in District Court during the year and there was no case of bond jumping. Twelve first-degree murder cases were closed during the year and none left pending.

Senate Group Votes to Modernize 5 Battleships

The Senate Naval Committee yesterday voted to partially modernize five battleships and curb subversive activities in the naval service.

Legislation imposing a fine of $1,000 and imprisonment for one to two years for any person inciting officers and men of the Navy to disobey orders was approved at a session of the committee called to wind up several "loose ends" of the rearmament program. The bill is designed to stop Communists from distributing literature advocating mutiny and disobedience of orders, naval officers told the committee.

The battleship reconditioning measure already has been passed by the House.

A total of $8,850,000 would be expended for new installations and repairs on the battleships Tennessee, California, Colorado, Maryland and West Virginia, under the bill. Rear Admiral William DuBose told the committee a complete modernization of the ships would cost $15,000,000 each, but that the Navy did not want to undertake such a program, because of the time and expense involved.

The pilot climbed out of the cockpit, grasped one of the wires and went hand over hand to the nearest pole, which he descended, unhurt.

Byrd Says U. S. Can Equip Polar Trip This Year

Assurances that the United States could equip and dispatch an exploratory expedition to the Antarctic before September 30 were made yesterday by Rear Admiral Richard E. Byrd at a meeting of State, Interior, Nevy, Treasury, and Agricultural Department officials.

Authority to decide whether the expedition will be launched this year or postponed until 1940 was tentatively vested in Secretary of Interior Ickes. Funds to finance the trip have been appropriated but Government experts have held the expedition could not get under way by September, deadline for polar sailings.

This country's claims to the Antarctic, whose mineral deposits are reportedly coveted by Nazi Germany, are based on the discoveries of Byrd and Lincoln Ellsworth.

Class Clashes Called Path to Dictator in U.S.

Conklin of Princeton Tells Teachers They Must Save Democracy

By the Associated Press.

San Francisco, July 5.—A warning that "warring parties and unions and ideologies" might "go so far as to cause a large part of the people to welcome a social dictatorship," was brought to the National Education Association tonight.

Edwin G. Conklin, Princeton University scientist and vice president of the American Philosophical Society, declared in an address prepared for the association's seventy-seventh annual convention:

"Upon the teachers of America rests to a large extent the opportunity and responsibility of making America safe for democracy."

"May Happen Here"

"The present crises of the world are largely caused by the deliberate training of people in bad habits of fear, hate, intolerance, aggression, greed, war."

"We should not forget that it was the abuses of freedom in Italy and Germany, the paralysis of governmental and social services by uncompromising conflicts among numerous political parties, labor unions, religious and social organizations, that led to the limitations of all freedom. And similar things may happen here . . ."

Oppose Racial Hatred

Preliminary recommendations of the resolutions committee brought suggestions that "some Federal agencies provide forecasts of occupational trends . . . for use in planning education programs" and that "an appreciation of the contributions of all races, creeds and nationalities be actively promoted by school assemblies . . . classroom teaching and by personal influence."

The latter resolution was prefaced with a statement that the association "views with concern the growing activities of certain agencies which seek to spread . . . the racial hatred and intolerance which have imperiled the peace of other nations."

"When our Nation has found it expedient . . . to double and quadruple . . . appropriations for . . . defense, an action . . . to increase the expenditure for public education by at least a tithe . . . would be an expression of strong faith in . . . American democracy," Howard A. Dawson, of Washington, NEA director of Rural Service, said in an address.

ion, "they need not be appropriated, and an expression of the intent of Congress that they be made available until June 30, 1941, for the purpose for which originally appropriated is all that is necessary to make such moneys so available. If 'an appropriation' is needed, this bill constitutes such an appropriation."

Fixes Level by Statute

The increased 71.1 cent price for domestic silver, although a cut under Senate silverites' demands for 77.47, fixes the new level permanently by statute, withdrawing executive discretion to change it. Although lamenting failure to win the higher figure, which they claim would have resulted from sending the bill back to conference, both Adams and McCarran called it an "improvement" for domestic silver miners.

"It amounts to the first remonitization of silver since it was demonitized in 1873," said Adams. "A miner can take his silver to the mint and get 55 per cent of it coined for a 45 per cent seigniorage charge."

Earlier in Senate debate, Senator Pittman, of Nevada, who unlike his colleague from that State accepted the conference "compromise," declared the agreement would remove the domestic silver industry from "the mercy of a department" by fixing the price "by law, forever." He charged Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau "is not only prejudiced against domestic silver, but he is vindictive."

But McCarran contended silverites stood to win more by forcing the bill back in conference and brought out from Senator Barkley that Pittman was consulted during the conference and assented to the 71.1-cent compromise.

Ashurst Urges Fight

Senator Ashurst, usually a stanch Administration supporter, also called it a "miserable compromise" and urged a last ditch fight for 77-cent silver. When Barkley challenged Ashurst's assertion that the Administration would support a higher silver price if the bill returned to conference, the quick-tongued Arizonan shot back:

"The Senator must not grow testy and irritated because one of his most loyal followers chooses—and rarely—to disagree with him." Pointing a finger at Barkley, he asserted he was "just as much a psychiatrist as is the Senator." Ashurst declared the conferees "are the servants of the Senate, and not its masters." He predicted that "within a day" they would bring back the higher silver price because they "very much desire to bring out something else (dollar devaluation) in that bill that will fall if they don't."

Unexpected opposition to the conference agreement came from Senator Maloney (Democrat), of Connecticut, who originally voted for dollar devaluation authority, but told the Senate yesterday he thought the power to continue foreign silver purchases would be "disastrous to American business."

Republicans, who talked the old currency stabilization law to death last Friday night, opened yesterday's assault on the conference agreement with a speech by Senator Austin, of Vermont, acting minority leader. Austin argued there was doubt of the constitutionality of the original monetary powers granted the President and "extension" of the powers after the old act had died further clouded their legality. Later, Senator Norris directed a blast at the Republican strategy, charging they had not only filibustered the old law to death but now were trying to make certain it was "dead past the day of resurrection."

As the debate ran on toward the 5 p. m. voting deadline, Senator Bridges (Republican), of New Hampshire charged Treasury purchases of foreign silver "have resulted in nothing except profit for the international silver speculators."

Leaves Treasury Free

The original Senate action banned foreign silver purchases, but the approved conference report leaves the Treasury free, as it has been, to buy the white metal abroad, from Mexico and elsewhere. Barkley contended a prohibition of this practice would be a needless blow at a neighboring nation and handicap the progress of national defense.

Last Treasury price for foreign silver was 38 cents an ounce, set Friday before the old law expired. It is expected to be posted again near this level today, after the President signs the bill.

Price of gold will continue unaffected at $35 an ounce, but yesterday's action gives the President authority to further devalue the dollar by raising the Treasury purchase price of gold to a maximum of $41.34 an ounce.

Pedro the Pigeon Isn't Home Mornings; He's Hooking Rides

Post Staff Photos.

Nancy Wilson, 8 (top), with her pigeon, Pedro, that alights on motor cars passing through Oxon Hill, Md., for a "hitch-flight." Pedro shows his technique in catching rides on the auto of Mrs. V. B. Borwick (lower)

Skyblue Bird May Lack Thumbs, but Not Hitchhiking Technique, Little Mistress Moans; Feeder of Crumbs Won't Be Tardy Again

In the record of the open road, write the name of Pedro the Pigeon, of Oxon Hill, Md., a skyblue cockbird with nothing more than a pigeon's disdainful cluck for all the "No Rider" signs on the trucks.

Eight-year-old Nancy Wilson, of Oxon Hill, Pedro's blonde mistress, has a terrible time with him. Pedro never stays home of mornings. That's when the bread truck comes to the store down the road. Pedro is always there, waiting. The truck driver is waiting for Pedro, too. The driver says: "Come on, Pedro, let's get going." And the pigeon lights on the truck fender and rides a mile down the road.

This bothers Nancy. The pigeon never is home. He always is snagging rides.

A second bread truck comes along, and the driver says: "Come on, Pedro, let's see the world." And Pedro, lighting on the fender, is off for another mile down the highway.

The ice man's truck is the last one to come. Pedro goes along with him for a mile, too. What can an 8-year-old girl do in a case like that? Nothing but stomp her foot and wonder what Pedro the pigeon is coming to.

But when the Wilson family, of a Sunday, goes driving, Pedro goes along, again on the fender, his head prideful in the wind. Nancy can't hear the clucking for the motor, but she knows that Pedro goes farther with the family than with the ice man and the bread man. That's something to think about.

But most amazed was Mrs. V. B. Borwick, who runs the store by the Wilson home. She had always thrown Pedro crumbs at an early hour, when the store opened. One morning she was late getting down. Pedro flew the mile to her home and made a feathery commotion at her window. She came out and Pedro lighted on the fender of her car and rode to work—and the crumbs—with her.

Schulte Drafts New Milk Bill To Ease Path

Clarifying Phrases Intended to Balk Cole's Point of Order

The House fight over the Schulte milk bill, which consumed several hours of debate on the last District day, became further clouded yesterday when Representative Schulte (Democrat), of Indiana, introduced a new proposal "for the sake of clarification."

Redrafted to avoid a point of order, the new bill follows the general provisions of the old legislation, but carries numerous "clarifying" phrases and rewording of clauses. It is the third time the bill has been rewritten.

Because it was introduced as new legislation, the House District Committee will be called into special session tomorrow to consider it so it may be placed on the House calendar for the next District day, which is Monday.

Rep. Smith Comments

"That means we'll start from scratch again," commented Representative Smith (Democrat), of Virginia, chief opponent of the proposal to substitute the United States Public Health Service milk code, with amendments, for the present District regulations.

Although two points of order against the Schulte bill were overruled by Speaker Bankhead on the last District day, Schulte said the new one, planned by Representative Cole (Democrat), of Maryland, would have been sustained.

Cole's projected point of order was that the second draft of the bill, which was an amendment to the original measure, was not germane to the first bill.

Schulte Sees 12-Cent Milk

Schulte, on hearing of the new maneuver to kill the bill, called in the legislative drafting counsel to revise his proposal to open up the Washington milkshed.

"Boys, as soon as this bill becomes a law," he declared, "milk will come down in Washington to 12 cents a quart."

Gunman Robs Store, Menaces Proprietor

An armed colored man escaped with $15 and a pair of brown shoes after holding at bay Irving Kinard, 904 Ninth street northwest, manager of a shoe store in the 1100 block Seventh street northwest, and looting the cash drawer.

Kinard said he was in the shop alone when the colored man entered. After trying on several pairs of shoes, the man whipped out a revolver and demanded the money. With the new shoes and cash the bandit ran from the store to a waiting taxicab.

Blood Bank Proves Real Success Here

should he take the equally grave risk of standing by until the needed blood was discovered, taken, cross-matched and transfused?

In this particular instance, the injured girl was receiving the life-strengthening fluid within half an hour after she was placed on the table. Had there been no blood bank, at least two hours would have been consumed in a frantic search for donors by radio and telephone. The girl, incidentally, made a good recovery.

An interesting sidelight on her case is that the girl's mother was hostess at a bridge party, one of many arranged last winter by The Post to raise funds for the blood bank, about two weeks before the accident occurred.

"The plan of storing blood in a refrigerator 'bank' is working very satisfactorily at Children's," said Superintendent Gibson. "It saves all the worry and irritating experiences we used to have finding donors.

Previously a donor had to be found for each separate case as it came up. Now, when a patient needs blood, his relatives and friends are asked to serve as volunteers, but meantime a transfusion is performed with a half-pint, more or less, from the bank.

The blood taken from these volunteers is carefully tested and stored for 10 days or less, during which period it may be given to the patient for whom it was originally intended—if he needs a second or third transfusion—or to some other youngster.

A grownup may be the beneficiary, too. In several instances other hospitals have made "loans" in emergency cases. These are relatively rare, however.

Prospective donors may make their "deposits" three times a week—Monday, Wednesday and Saturday, at 8:30 a. m. One recent volunteer not only gave blood but also a cash sum to help the bank along. Yesterday there were five donors, three white and two colored.

According to Dr. Rice, the occurrence of reactions among patients transfused from the bank is no greater than it was under the old system, and probably less.

'Duck Bootleger' War Launched; Shoreman Jailed

Night spots along the Atlantic seaboard will be serving less wild duck and goose in the future, officials of the Bureau of Biological Survey predicted yesterday, following the 20-day jail sentence given to a "duck bootlegger."

Stanley J. Hoffman, of Wenona, Md., was sentenced in Baltimore by a Federal court. Judge William C. Coleman, before whom he was tried, delivered a reprimand, including also "certain other residents in the Eastern Shore area who have flouted the law."

Last year Federal agents destroyed nearly 500 traps along the Eastern Shore. Hoffman's was the first jail sentence given to break up the illicit bootlegging of migratory fowl in the area.

Bobby Jones Asks U. S. Court to Lift Tax Levy Stymie

By the Associated Press.

Robert T. (Bobby) Jones, jr., the Atlanta golfer, asked the Supreme Court yesterday to referee a contest with the Government over 1931 and 1933 income tax payments.

Jones asked a refund of $53,338, assessed by the Commissioner of Internal Revenue on $156,200 paid the golfer's father by Warner Brothers Pictures, Inc., under a contract for a series of 18 one-reel pictures relating to golf.

Jones' petition said that in 1931 he gave his father "the exclusive right" to "his services as a motion-picture actor" for six years "for a nominal consideration of $1,000 per year." The elder Jones was said to have put his interest in the contract in trust for the three children of the golfer.

The petition said a "plan to decrease taxes . . . admittedly was one of petitioner's motives in making the gift of his services."

Justice Crater's Death Violent, Widow Contends

New York, July 5 (AP).—A conviction that the long-missing Supreme Court Justice Joseph Force Crater met "sudden, very unexpected and violent death" was voiced today by his widow in a suit to collect $60,000 double indemnity on insurance policies against his life.

Breaking nine years of reticence as to her former husband's fate, the widow, now Mrs. Stella Kunz, for the first time expressed a definite belief that Justice Crater died by "external, violent or accidental means" and that his body was "disposed of by cremation" or otherwise.

The widow's attorney, Emil K. Ellis, hinted that further disclosures may be forthcoming when the suit comes to trial probably early in October.

HAPPY RELIEF FROM PAINFUL BACKACHE

Many of those gnawing, nagging, painful backaches people blame on colds or strains are often caused by tired kidneys—and may be relieved when treated in the right way.

The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking excess acids and poisonous waste out of the blood. Most people pass about 3 pints a day or about 3 pounds of waste.

Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning shows there may be something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

If the 15 miles of kidney tubes and filters don't work well, poisonous waste matter stays in the blood. These poisons may start nagging backaches, rheumatic pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from the blood. Get Doan's Pills. Adv.

Insulting Innitzer

It is not easy to understand the significance of the latest indignities to which the office and person of Theodore Cardinal Innitzer have been subjected by the Nazi mobs. The insults, repeated in the various parishes of northwestern Austria, through which Cardinal Innitzer had been making a tour, appear to have reached a climax Sunday at Koenigsbrunn, where he was pelted with decayed eggs, his purple biretta knocked from his head and his attendants beaten.

These demonstrations against an ecclesiastic of such rank are without any parallel in modern times. That they were spontaneous is wholly improbable. The ostensible grievance of the mobs, that Cardinal Innitzer had not exerted himself to obtain pardon for the Nazi assassins of the late Chancellor Engelbert Dollfus, seems so absurd as to have been hurriedly and clumsily manufactured for the occasion.

It is possible, of course, that the persecution of Cardinal Innitzer may be merely the Nazi tactic for testing whether time is ripening for the frontal attack on German Catholicism that has so long been prophesied.

In nature these insults are not unlike some of those inflicted on Jews in Berlin and elsewhere in the earlier days of the Hitler regime. This, however, does not explain why of the four Cardinals in the Greater Reich, Mgr. Innitzer should have been made the special object of insult.

After the anschluss his attitude toward the regime seemed considerably less reserved than that of either Cardinal von Faulhaber of Munich or Cardinal Schulte of Cologne. He acknowledged the legality of the Nazi government and wrote "Heil Hitler" above his signature in a letter expressing loyalty to the chancellor. After the annexation of the Sudetenland, he caused the church bells of Vienna to be tolled in thanksgiving.

Nevertheless, and especially after his conference with the late Pope Pius XI, he has grown more and more outspoken in his protests against Nazi encroachments on concerns of the church, and he has courageously resisted all efforts to paganize the youth of Austria. To the message of encouragement sent him by the American bishops after the looting of his palace last October he replied that he was ready, if necessary, "to walk the dolorous way of Christ, Our Lord."

Lingvon De La Menso

Mayor LaGuardia must have disappointed a good many of his admirers by not being on hand Monday for the celebration of Esperanto Day at the New York World's Fair. We had supposed that Mr. LaGuardia, who has been delighting all ears with his exhibition of linguistic virtuosity, would rise superbly to this occasion.

But, of course, an artist like the mayor may regard a language that has not one irregular verb with much the same disdainful tolerance that Mr. Joe DiMaggio might exhibit for the gentle game of beanbag. Anyhow, the mayor apparently was not there to lead the singing of

Ridu, ridu,—ho, ho, ho!
Plorado estas vana;
Tutkore ridu—ho, ho, ho!
Kaj ciam restu sana.

Thus did the Esperantists combine "the universal language of the heart" (muziko) with "the universal language of the mind." Everybody present, except the initiates, assumed that what they were singing was the Esperanto version of our old friend, "Yankee Doodle." The air, indeed, was the same but the words, it now appears, mean something rather different and more risible.

However, we suppose, that the real Yankee Doodle would have made as much sense in Esperanto as in the original English, or perhaps more. There are extremists who say that nobody has fully appreciated Shakespeare who has not read him in Esperanto. Certainly, some poets do seem to gain by translation, as for instance, Longfellow:

Ma pafis sagon en la seron
Ne scias kie ge falis tenon.

Still we shall not become converted until we see what the Esperantists can do with something really difficult, like the following passage by Edmund Cannon:

If down his throat a man should choose,
In fun, to jump or slide,
He'd scrape his shoes against his teeth
Nor dirt his own inside.
Or if his teeth were lost and gone
And not a stump to scrape upon,
He'd see at once how very pat
His tongue lay there by way of mat,
And he would wipe his feet on that!

The President Is Right

The strong stand both President Roosevelt and Secretary Hull have taken against neutrality legislation which aids the aggressors arises out of an awareness that the United States cannot resign from the family of nations. Such realism is, unfortunately, lacking in certain Congressional quarters.

The United States is the most powerful nation on earth. Its influence is world-wide. And that influence can be of decisive importance whether we take a positive or negative stand on the great issues facing the nations of the world, whether we act or fail to act.

This is one side of the picture. There is another side. Because the United States is too big to live in a vacuum, whatever happens in the world outside our borders is bound, in greater or lesser fashion, to have a bearing on our lives and fortunes as well. We cannot, therefore, afford to be indifferent to the forces and tendencies which threaten Western civilization and the peace of the world.

For that reason it is dangerous folly to assume that we have no interest in what is happening and what may happen abroad. If Europe remains at peace, if the all-too-long cycle of aggression is brought to a stop, it is not only the peaceful nations of the Old World that will be benefited by such a development. The benefit will also be ours. For with Europe at peace, our own wholehearted determination to remain at peace would then be subject to no challenge.

On the other hand, if aggressions continue and Europe is ultimately plunged into war, the chances of our staying out would ipso facto be lessened. There have been two world wars since the United States was founded. We became involved on both occasions.

Considerations of this sort make it peremptory for Congress not to lessen the influence which the United States can exert for peace. And that is precisely what would happen if Congress approves neutrality legislation that works in favor of the axis powers and against the European democracies.

The House bill is built on a fundamentally false and dangerous premise! It assumes that the United States is incapable of taking any effective measures to help insure peace. And it also assumes that it makes no difference to us whether in the struggle now going on in the Old World the axis powers or the democracies come out on top.

The Gallup poll suggests that the American people see the situation clearly. A recent sampling of public opinion by the Gallup organization revealed that, in the half year after Munich, the percentage of those questioned who favored the sale of arms to Great Britain and France in case of war increased by almost 100 per cent, with two out of every three prepared to sanction such a course.

Instinctively a very large number of Americans realize that a further weakening of the European democracies would react unfavorably upon us; that a strengthening of the axis powers may ultimately imperil our peace and security. In this they show themselves infinitely wiser than some of their legislators.

The Weak Spot

According to the Department of Commerce, a wide range of industries report an improvement in business during the past six weeks. However, Secretary Hopkins points out that there has been no corresponding upturn in private capital expenditures.

That is shown by the prevailing stagnation of the market for new capital issues. While new security flotations for May, exclusive of direct obligations of the United States Government, reached the highest figure recorded for that month since 1929, over 90 per cent of the total represented refunding operations as compared with only 25 per cent ten years ago. Moreover, most of the refunding last May was done by a Government agency—the HOLC. New corporate financing in May, excluding issues of Government agencies, States, and municipalities, dropped to the insignificant figure of $20,990,000.

So long as the market for so-called "venture" capital remains in its present dormant state, it is useless to hope for a business recovery of sufficient scope to provide jobs for the millions of able-bodied unemployed. That is why, despite the reasonably satisfactory business outlook, reflected in trade and production indices and trends, the pressure for Government pump-priming persists.

The banks are at present in possession of a huge amount of idle funds, as shown by their excess reserves totaling more than $4,000,000,000. Interest rates are also at abnormally low levels. Yet these conditions, ideal though they appear to be from the borrower's viewpoint, have not resulted in the desired increase of loans for industrial expansion and improvement.

Since President Roosevelt assumed office, Congress has appropriated over $20,000,000,000 for recovery and relief purposes. All these billions, plus the large sum paid in cash bonuses to veterans, have temporarily increased public purchasing power, and thus provided a fillip to business. But the energizing force of a sustained demand for new capital to be used in private industry has been conspicuously lacking. Despite the failure of these previous pump-priming efforts, the President has again come forward with a new spending program, thinly camouflaged as a plan to lend Government money for self-liquidating projects.

Each abortive effort to revive the spirit of private enterprise and put life in the market for new capital issues has added to the burden of Federal indebtedness and to the prospective burden of taxes required to carry that debt. This debt legacy, combined with the feeling of uneasiness created by a chronically unbalanced budget, actually discourages the investment revival it is designed to facilitate. Hence Secretary Hopkins' good report concerning the business outlook will be received with decidedly tempered enthusiasm, considering that no progress whatever has been made toward solving the Nation's No. 1 economic problem—that of reviving private investment activity.

What Of Appeasement?

Without waiting for the Temporary National Economic Committee, of which he is chairman, to make its preliminary report on monopoly and price problems, Senator O'Mahoney has introduced a bill carrying drastic civil penalties for violation of the antitrust laws. This measure, introduced after conferences with Assistant Attorney General Arnold, evidently has the indorsement of the Department of Justice.

According to Senator O'Mahoney, it is "designed to bring violations of the law home to officers and directors of corporations who are personally responsible for the economic offenses of the corporations they represent." The bill would permit the United States to bring suit for damages against an offending corporation and against its individual directors and officers. It would also permit the United States to bring suit to terminate the corporate employment of any officer or director who is responsible for a violation of the antitrust laws.

As a matter of fact, the bill covers not only corporations and their directors but includes under the all-embracing definition given to the word "company," partnerships, associations, joint stock companies, business trusts or "any organized group of persons, whether incorporated or not." That undoubtedly would bring trade associations within the scope of the proposed legislation. Hence, an officer or director of one of these organizations would be in a most precarious position if he should sanction any sort of inquiry or action that might be interpreted as a restraint of trade.

The bill states that "any violation of any provision of the antitrust laws by any company shall be a violation of such provision by each officer or director of such company who shall have done, or authorized, ordered or caused to be done, any act constituting in whole or in part such violation." The penalties in case of conviction are forfeiture to the United States of a sum equal to twice the compensation received for every month during which a violation has occurred. Moreover, any company which violates the antitrust laws is liable to forfeiture of twice its total net income during every month in which the violation occurred.

Such a drastic measure would put a powerful weapon in the hands of the Department of Justice with which to coerce and intimidate business. Even if the power were used judiciously and sparingly, the anxiety created by passage of punitive legislation of this type is certainly not conducive to a state of mind favorable to business recovery. So much stress has been laid—and rightly—upon the importance of establishing friendly relations between regulatory governmental agencies and regulated business that a return to the system of "cracking down" seems most reactionary. Besides, the obscurities of the antitrust laws make it virtually impossible for businessmen to be sure whether they are operating at all times strictly within the law.

Senator O'Mahoney is wrong in concluding that "one of the principal reasons why the antitrust laws have not heretofore prevented combinations and mergers hostile to the public interest is that the penalties and remedies for violations as now provided are altogether inadequate."

These laws have been ineffectual chiefly because they have not made due allowances for the irresistible character of the economic forces making for combinations.

If there is one lesson to be derived from our struggles to control and mold economic developments it is that punitive legislation is not effective unless it is intelligently framed. We do not need stiffer penalties to make our laws work, but better laws to enforce.

A speeder told the Court he was trying to reach a filling station before he ran out of gas. We are reminded of a certain country that is frantically trying to spend itself into prosperity before it runs out of money.

Swing Toward Sanity

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Two column writers in The Sunday Post of July 2 tell of the tree planting fashion, started on Fifth avenue in front of Rockefeller Center, that is rapidly spreading in the heart of New York City. One of the thoroughfares scheduled for planting is Sixth avenue, for many years a squalid eyesore, now in line to be beautified.

Another article in a recent Sunday Post, by Herbert U. Nelson, vice president of the National Association of Real Estate Boards, tells of the recent trend in several American communities toward abolishing traffic entirely in several of their shopping districts at certain hours of the day, in order to allow customers to shop in peace.

At long last businessmen seem to be learning that shoppers and buyers are for the time being pedestrians, and that the excessive deference to speed, on which there has been so much stress during the development of the motor age—widening streets, cutting down trees and the like—does not help their business, but harms it.

As Mr. Nelson points out, merchants are finding out that human beings and machines do not mix, and that people prefer to shop in pleasant surroundings, walking on quiet sidewalks under shade trees, to dodging traffic, choked by gasoline fumes.

Is it possible that we have lived to see the day when the swing of machine age destruction and uglification has reached its limit, even in our big American cities, and that the pendulum is once more on the return swing toward sanity and natural beauty?

These appear to be hopeful indications. THERESA H. RUSSELL.
Washington, July 3.

The European Crisis

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The impending crisis in Europe and divided Congressional opinion as to what should be our attitude should a European conflagration begin, calls for consideration of the underlying economic situation.

The anomaly that our monetary and trade policies have and are serving to strengthen and fortify the axis powers is paralleled by analogous results in trade of Great Britain and her lending to peace-front states. The triangle of her trade with these is actually operating to supply Germany with the means of completing her war preparations. France, Belgium, Rumania and Turkey buy more from Germany than from England. Great Britain buys more from Russia, Greece, Rumania and Turkey, respectively, than she does from Germany. A great drop in our purchases of raw materials from the British dominions and colonies may account for the heavy adverse British trade balance.

The compulsion of economic forces is thence to appeasement such as will revive Britain's trade with Germany and the effort to bring the axis powers to the conference table becomes more understandable; indeed, the present urge to appeasement may well before the summer is over emerge as paramount British policy if the pressing economic necessity and actual rivalry of the axis powers stay their policy of plunder.

Our own and British trade are heavily weighted with commerce in war material and industrial, natural and agricultural products, all vital to war's conduct. The outbreak of a European conflagration must end this so far as it advantages aggressor power. The amazing thing is that such action must await that contingency; that for a decade of threats to world peace and of wanton aggression, the directives of Anglo-American economic foreign policy have remained insensitive to increasing danger, and that political action, to arrest what most strengthens aggression appears to be paralyzed. Would the loss in terms of overseas trade be so staggering as to forbid renunciation of this blood money?

Quite aside from the immorality of British and American external trade and commerce as so constituted, quite apart from its repugnancy to what the amity of nations requires of them, it bears challenge to that dollar and pound sterling exchange upon which is floated transactions in untold sums revivifying and supporting aggressor power. Until an aroused public opinion grapples with this problem, it is difficult to see that appeasement or any measure of conciliation will serve to foster mad militarism.

Great Britain and America must concert to give force and effect to Lord Coke's great maxim "conventio privatorum non protest iure publico derogare" (private transaction may not transcend public law), and bring peace-front commerce into accord with it.

J. WHITLA-STINSON.
Warrenton, Va., July 4.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The best suggestion for avoiding world war during the next few weeks or months comes from Sir Arthur Salter's new book, "Security: Can We Retrieve It?"

He proposes that Britain issue at once a "manifesto" including a list of the concessions she is willing to make in exchange for valid guarantees that the present aggressors will become satisfied co-operators. This list would include a new treaty to replace that of Versailles (minus the guilt clause and other needless irritations); a meeting of Germany's trade requirements (by freedom of trade with colonies for all; by barter, and perhaps by spheres of trade influence); and a readjustment of the whole colonial situation, giving to all colonies a more international status.

At these proposals, many will protest, "What! More appeasement?" and to this Sir Arthur replies that there is probably a "hard core" of demands which the Germans (as distinguished from Dictator Hitler) are willing to fight for, and this "hard core" resembles more or less closely what Britain is ready to concede in the proposed "manifesto." Hitler would not be satisfied, but he could hardly fail to see that the German people were thus suddenly offered a third way out of the extremely hot spot in which they now find themselves. Previously the ways out were only two: (1) risk all by following Hitler; or (2) risk a return to the tender mercies of 1919 by opposing Hitler. But the "manifesto" would give to them, and to Hitler, a third way out, less desperately risky, and withal a substantial attainment of the "place in the sun" so long desired.

Over against the admitted uncertainties of this plan, we should place the certainty that, without something of this sort, the armed defiance of Hitler's aggressions, at Danzig and elsewhere, would solidify German support behind him and, soon or late, force his opponents to wage a war in defense of a morally indefensible status quo.

Ways to Peace

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In the recent debate in your columns between Mr. Linn A. E. Gale and Representative Hamilton Fish, it occurs to me that Mr. Gale had considerably the better of the discussion. Mr. Gale stated his position on the Roosevelt foreign policy logically and consistently, while Mr. Fish's attack on Mr. Gale, made on the floor of the House under Congressional immunity, was a typical red-baiting speech.

It is significant that a man who was such an outstanding opponent of American participation in the World War as Mr. Gale should back the present foreign policy of the Administration. Mr. Fish, who now plays the part of an ardent pacifist, is in a most contradictory role when he censures Mr. Gale for so vigorously advocating peace 20 years ago when it was highly unpopular. It required courage to take an anti-war stand in the World War, but it is quite a popular thing to eulogize peace nowadays, so Mr. Fish is on pretty safe ground and inviting no such danger as Mr. Gale faced.

Everybody believes in peace in theory, but it is far from certain that Mr. Fish's method is the best one. The Roosevelt way is a more practical and realistic one.

Alcatraz

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It is hard to imagine what reason Attorney General Murphy may have had in mind in proposing the abandonment of Alcatraz Federal Prison, which he calls a place of horror.

It should be a place of horror, so that criminals may dread being sent there worse than anything else. Our Federal prisons are often subject to prison breaks, uprisings and disastrous escapes. It seems to me that this high, smooth rock in the middle of San Francisco Bay is the very best place imaginable for the necessary safe confinement of the proven most hardened and most dangerous criminals—the only class for which Alcatraz is intended.

A reformatory might well include pleasant surroundings, with certain suitable teachings and privileges to encourage and train the will of inmates to reform. But the prisoners of Alcatraz are supposed to be beyond reform. Certainly their chance of escape should be made as nearly as possible unattainable—not with any purpose of torturing the prisoners, but merely in order safely to protect law-abiding citizens.

My Big Moment

INTO EVEN the slenderest lives have come big moments. In some instances the life itself has been so svelte that in after years the liver of that life looks back at what seems like a snake that had swallowed a pumpkin.

Sometimes it takes considerable thinking to pick out the big moment. It may have come to loom so constantly as not to be readily noticeable. But a few moments of careful review will divulge it. There she stands—your Big Moment!

Personally, I have never had the slightest difficulty in putting the finger on my Big Moment. Neither have I had the slightest hesitancy in relating the story that led to it. For every time I speak of it, all the glory of that Big Moment returns—I re-revel in its grandeur.

I had spellbound an audience in a little college town in Iowa. My Monday engagement (this was a Saturday evening) was in St. Paul or beyond. Anyway, I had to get to the Twin Cities Sunday. My only chance was to ride an Illinois Central westbound night train which didn't stop ordinarily, or else drive some eight or ten miles to a point on the Great Western Railway.

Rivalry between the roads for passenger business in that section was responsible for my getting permission to stop the Illinois Central fast night train at this tank town. So the local agent, who was not permitted to sell Twin City tickets for that train, and who would, in fact, be lost in shuteye long before that awful eleven p. m. hour, brought the ticket to the hotel, in the afternoon (it having been sent over from Dubuque) and collected for it.

Armed with my ticket—and I was the only human awake in the town—I went to the station shortly before eleven. It was a mild winter night, which was fortunate, since the station was locked. A coal oil lantern suspended from the corner of the building, swayed in the gentle night wind. After a period probably shorter than it seemed, a headlight showed in the East. "Ah hah," I thought." There she comes, and she's either ahead of time or it is quite a distance to where she is to where I am."

On came the train. But instead of heading into the house track, she took a siding. So I knew—in my familiarity with railroad parlance—it was a long drag (freight train) and that she was going into the big hole to let No. 1 pass.

The "brains" (conductor) of the freight, accompanied by the "tail-shack" (rear brakeman or flagman) came moseying up to the station. Seeing me standing there, the conductor held up his lantern, inspected me, and asked:

"What you here for?"

"I'm taking that westbound passenger."

"But it don't stop here."

"It does tonight"—business of putting thumbs into armholes. Was I sumpin', then?

The two trainmen looked at each other, then at me, and their looks said more plainly than words:

"Humph! Big shot, eh—certainly don't look it!"

They stood around and lavished a few surreptitious leers upon me. You certainly can't tell, by a toad's looks, how far he can jump—that was their thought.

Finally there came another headlight in the East.

"There she comes"—a chorus.

She came, and how. That train went through that station yard like a bat out of torment. It didn't even hesitate. It went through with head and tail up and belly dragging the ground!

Was I sick! The two trainmen looked at each other, nodded, meaning "Nerts, like we thought," and headed back to the train, while I dizzily and hopelessly watched those tail lights disappear toward the West. The conductor started to lift his lantern to highball the drag out of the big hole when—three whistles were wafted from the West!

"Hey; listen!" said Brains, excitedly.

Three whistles meant but one thing to his practiced ear. It said "coming back."

And there came the red light from the West, the valve whistle squealing; the fast passenger was backing three miles to pick me up! The engineer had forgot his flimsy that told him to make the stop.

The look on the faces of those two railroaders as I leisurely mounted the rear platform to face an apologetic conductor, and turned to say a scornful "Good night" while I stifled and patted a nonchalant yawn—was that a treat to my soul so recently writhing in dust! If anybody had bought me at my own estimate of my importance when that train had dashed by; and sold me for what I would have asked when it came back and picked me up, he would have made a fortune in jigtime.

STRICKLAND GILLILAN.

Democracy

I believe in collective bargaining where two or more bind themselves together for mutual benefit, but I can find no prerogative in the American Constitution or history where any union or individual can forbid the use of any other party's work or labor. We are a democracy, we have no arch-ruler or totalitarian leader. Our President is only the Chief Clerk of all people of the United States to see that the laws are carried out as passed by Congress, which represents the people, and the Supreme Court an observant tribunal to see that these laws do not deviate from the Constitution.—Edward Werterlund, Sterling, Va.

Fair Enough

The Licensed Radio

IT LOOKS as though the perfidious press will have to take over the fight to establish freedom of the radio, which the President, Mr. Farley and Mr. Ickes so often extol as an agency of pure expression. The radio companies live by license from a political bureau of the New Deal which has the power to harass, intimidate and, ultimately, ruin them. They are, as a group, a dangerous rival of the newspapers, which have had to share with radio the advertising revenue which once was particularly all theirs. The press, therefore, has a selfish motive for wishing the worst of luck, but, ironically, finds itself compelled to assist its commercial rival in a feeble struggle against coercion and censorship lest a controlled radio be used as a propaganda arm to destroy the freedom of the press.

Although Mr. Roosevelt has said that in some communities untruth and exaggerated half-truth may be overtaken only by radio and Mr. Farley has declared that only by air may he present a case to the people unedited, radio finds itself afraid to urge its own case over its own medium. If radio did so it would necessarily attack the political agency of the New Deal which controls its conduct and issues the licenses by which it operates.

Political Control Of Radio Stressed

IF IT DID that it would displease its political bosses and risk painful or disastrous reprisals. Therefore, radio relies on the newspapers to present its case to the public, and it has been the press which has emphasized the hidden significance of the ruling of the communications commission which requires that international broadcasts must promote international good-will, understanding and co-operation. This ruling might be invoked to rule off the President and Mr. Ickes themselves—doubtless an unforeseen possibility—but if the same principle were applied to domestic broadcasts the broadcasters would be obliged to promote internal good-will, understanding and co-operation according to the commission's interpretation.

Surely the commission would not regard criticism of the New Deal or itself, as a contribution to internal good-will, understanding and co-operation. In fact, in the press such criticism has been fiercely resented, and, for punishment, the New Deal has repeatedly praised the radio to the detriment of the papers but without explaining the uncertain and the risky state in which radio lives under political control.

Canned Speeches Given To Stations

THE PRESIDENT recently said that the people have a right to expect their Government to keep them supplied with sober facts, but left unsaid the fact that the New Deal has been sending out pancakes, or radio records, with a sly but firm intimation that these pancakes had better be given on the air. They are accompanied by a request for accurate information as to when they were played, and, although this might express an innocent curiosity, it might also conceal an intention to check up and discipline stations which found the pancakes inappropriate. As to whether they contain "sober facts", there must be some dispute, but it may safely be assumed that the Government departments are putting out no sober facts which criticize the Administration adversely.

There is a difficulty in the fact that the air belongs to the Nation, so to speak, and therefore must be subject to Government regulation. That much is not disputed, but it does not mean that the air belongs to the New Deal any more than it belongs to the Republican Party. But in using the radio for New Deal propaganda the Administration puts itself in the position of a trustee who uses his authority to promote his own interests and impair the interests of the trust. For certainly if radio is allowed to live under frank or implied coercion it loses that purity which the President found so admirable—indeed, its chief virtue.

Lives Under Threat Of Partisan Discipline

BUT RADIO ITSELF lives in a state of fear and political jitters. Individuals in the business may pretend to admire the commission and its methods, but they are open to the obvious suspicion that they are playing ball with the New Deal for the advantage which it will bring them in the form of valuable official favor.

Others realize that the industry lives under a threat of partisan political discipline and looks to their economic enemy, the press, for help in a fight for independence, afraid, however, to speak for publication or appear anywhere in the picture except as confidential informants on matters which radio dares not appeal to the public over its own medium.

Punitive Duty On Silk From Italy

Treasury Increases Tariff As Counter To Export Subsidies

By the United Press.

The Treasury Department yesterday imposed contervailing tariff duties on silk textile imports from Italy after investigation verified that the Fascist power is subsidizing the exports by paying bounties to Italian producers in violation of the 1930 tariff act.

The duties, equal "to any bounty or grant found to have been paid or bestowed," will become effective in 30 days.

Less than two months ago the Treasury levied 25 per cent countervailing duties on all German products which investigation also showed to be subsidized.

Seen As Sanctions

The twin moves, which some observers described as imposition of economic sanctions against the totalitarian states, strike at the internal economy of both countries.

Silk textiles are among Italy's principal exports and the United States has taken a substantial portion of them. Scores of German products were affected including heavy machinery, cameras, leather goods, etc.

The Treasury said that pending exact determinations of the silk bounties Italian exporters will be required to post deposits equal to the estimated countervailing duty. The duties do not apply to raw silk, which is tariff-free, nor to silk imported as gifts or of articles purchased at retail for personal use.

Must Equal Subsidy

Section 303 of the tariff act makes it mandatory that duties equivalent to the amount of the subsidy be exacted from any products thus imported. It is intended as a brake against international trade practices which tend to undersell American producers and otherwise restrict markets for United States products.

Italy is one of Japan's principal competitors in the American silk textile market. Up to 1935 Italian silk production was declining but was stimulated thereafter by granting of export subsidies.

Some observers said that application of the duties would not affect Italy to a critical extent, but that they would demonstrate to the fascist government that the United States possesses potent economic weapons which can be invoked when Italy displeases this country.

They pointed out that yesterday's action might be the forerunner of other moves intended to impress upon Premier Benito Mussolini that this country is not in sympathy with his warlike moves against France and Great Britain.

Formula for Tariff

The Customs Bureau prescribed the following formula to be used in calculating the deposit:

It is to be predicated "on the net weights of the silk (including schappe and bourette) contained in the imported products, plus 33 1-3 per cent of such weights if the natural gum has been removed from the silk used in the production or manufacture of the imported product."

"(A) Raw silk yarns, dyed, simple or twisted of double cocoons; 32.8 lire per kilogram.

(One lira is equal to about 5.25 cents. A kilogram is about 2.2 pounds.)

"(B) Yarns of silk waste (schappe) including sewing thread; 49.2 lire per kilogram.

"(C) Yarns of combing (bourretted); 8.2 lire per kilogram.

"(D) Raw silk doubled and twisted, drawn, dyed silk, silk sewing thread; 24.5 lire per kilogram.

"(E) Woven materials, velvets, ribbons, tulles, crepes, knit goods and stockings, in raw state; 87 lire per kilogram, with variations according to the type of yarn.

"(F) Woven materials, velvets, ribbons, tulles, crepes, knit goods and stockings, exported in the dyed or finished state; 89.5 lire per kilogram of silk content with variations according to the type of yarn."

Repeal Quarantine Laws, King Asks

A bill to repeal all laws relative to the length of quarantine for various communicable diseases and to substitute authority for the District Commissioners to promulgate regulations was introduced in the Senate yesterday by Chairman King of the Senate District Committee.

The Commissioners pointed out that medical opinion on the length of certain quarantines has changed since the acts were passed.

Senator King also introduced a bill to permit minors in professional traveling companies to perform on stages in the District.

Atkinson Reappointed

District Commissioners yesterday reappointed Richard D. Atkinson a member of the board of barber examiners for three years.

Emergency Powers

By Mark Sullivan

When Do They Cease?

THE MONETARY BILL, as debated and now passed, contains three provisions, about separate matters. One is to renew the "stabilization fund." This is a fund of $2,000,000,000 which the Treasury uses to keep the value of the dollar always about the same, in terms of British pounds, French francs, and other currencies. This is useful for making it practicable to carry on foreign trade. The common judgment is that the stabilization fund has been well managed. Few wish to end it. Practically all who opposed the monetary bill as a whole were willing to let the stabilization part of it continue.

The second part of the monetary bill has to do with the purchase of silver by the Treasury. The purchases are made at a higher price than the market. It has been claimed that this is some advantage to the country in international trade and in foreign relations. However that may be, there is no doubt about one effect of this silver purchasing. It gives a bonus to owners of silver dollars. Senators representing States having silver mines are the most earnest supporters of it.

The third part of the monetary bill is the most controversial part. Congress, in 1933, gave the President power to reduce the value of the dollar, that is, its gold content. The original power permitted reduction to one-half, 50 cents. At that time, the President exercised this power by reducing the dollar from—to put it this way—100 cents to roughly 59 cents. He still had power to reduce it by 9 cents more. This power expired June 30. It was about renewal of this power that controversy arose.

Merits Of Stable Dollar Pointed Out

WITH RESPECT to this power, as a monetary power, a common judgment is that there is little or no need for it. Practically anything the President could accomplish by further reduction of the dollar he can accomplish by the stabilization fund or by other monetary powers he has.

Opponents of renewal felt that by not renewing, the effect would be to fix the value of the dollar at its present figure, roughly 59 cents. They held that the mere act of making the value of the dollar a fixed thing would have merit. It would introduce one fixed thing, one island of stability, into a national condition and a world condition, in which nearly everything else is afloat and fluctuating. To set up this one rock of stability, they argued, might be a first step toward a new era of stability and certainty, the sort of condition upon which confidence can be built.

However, opponents of the President's power to devalue the dollar based their opposition on grounds broader than monetary. They said the President has more powers than it is wise any President should have. President Roosevelt has more powers than any President ever had before—certainly in peace-time, and in some respects even in wartime. No President ever before had the power to devalue the dollar at will—that is a power which the Constitution gives to Congress, and which Congress has heretofore jealously held for itself.

Seeks To Maintain Emergency Powers

THE POWERS GIVEN the President by Congress, including the devaluation power, were given him during his first years in office. They were given him in the spirit of emergency. Most of the measures granting powers to the President recited in their preambles words to the effect that "Whereas an emergency exists." Some powers were given him with a time limit, expressly stated in the statute, like the power to devalue the dollar, which came to its statutory end June 30.

Some critics feel, or fear, or suspect, that there is a disposition on the part of the President not only to hold on permanently to the powers given him for the purpose of an emergency but even to broaden those powers, to ask more. They think that the New Deal means to build up, within the executive branch of the Government, an amount of power which would elevate the executive branch above both Congress and the courts, which would make the executive branch a kind of government within the Government. The feeling to this effect applies to the whole area of Government.

For this apprehension there is some reason. Some parts of the New Deal show a disposition to try to hold themselves free from interference by either the courts or Congress. The National Labor Relations Board, for example, resents and opposes the power asserted by the courts to look into testimony taken by the board and to question actions of the board based on such testimony. The Labor Board seems to hold for itself the exclusive power to interpret the testimony which it takes.

Labor Board Seeks Legislative Power

AS TO THE ATTITUDE of the Labor Board toward Congress, there is a recent striking example. It has been the practice of the Labor Board to deny employers the right to ask the board to hold elections in their plants. This attitude of the board led to a request that Congress amend the national labor law so as to require the board to receive such requests from employers. Congress apparently was disposed to amend the law to this effect. Thereupon the Labor Board announced that henceforth it would of its own initiative permit employers to make such requests. This seems to show a disposition by the board to forestall Congress. The board seems to wish to hold within itself the power and discretion to change fundamental policies at will. The board, in short, seems to assert, for itself, the power of legislation, which power is, of course, the prerogative of Congress.

This is the sort of thing that was symbolized by the opposition to the President's monetary power. The opponents of this and other powers of the President are proceeding on a clear principle. The principle is that matters vitally affecting the citizen should be written into clear and unmistakable laws passed by Congress and should not be left to the discretion either of the President or of the many administrative agencies.

Prologue To Hitler

"MEN AGAINST HITLER," by Fritz Max Cahen (Bobbs-Merrill, $2), is described as "adapted," for this American edition, by Wythe Williams, who also supplies an introduction. Mr. Williams, as a foreign correspondent in Berlin during and after the World War, tells how he met the author and got from him a copy of the first draft of the proposed peace treaty in Berlin, not officially released to the public. Mr. Cahen was then in the German diplomatic service, a confidential assistant to Count Brockdorff-Rantzau, head of the German delegation to Versailles.

He relates that he was sent with the draft to Berlin, and that Brockdorff-Rantzau likewise gave him a message to the German Prime Minister, Scheidemann: "Never sign this, never." Mr. Cahen says that he himself wrote in advance the protest made by Brockdorff-Rantzau against the formal charge of Germany's war guilt in the peace terms.

Nevertheless, Mr. Cahen considers that it was a mistake for the allied armies to refrain from marching to Berlin as a condition of armistice. "That was the only way to show the German people that the war was lost." Failing such a demonstration, it was possible to disseminate in Germany the myth of a "victorious" German army "stabbed in the back" by pacifists behind the lines. This was the excuse for later Jewish persecutions.

THE TREATY was signed. Subsequent events as related by Mr. Cahen do not make sense; but that is not to say they did not happen. Political developments throughout the world since the war don't make much sense; they make precisely what we see. In Germany, Mr. Cahen says, he was asked by two men, Herr von Gleichen-Russwurm and Dr. Stadtler, to help organize and direct a "National Party of German Workmen," on behalf of Stinnes, Thyssen and other big industrialists. Believing that the people desired "socialism," they proposed to deliver it. The idea was, more or less, to "take communism away from the Communists." The fact that they would have whatever it was they took over does not seem to have occurred to anyone concerned.

Mr. Cahen did not accept the proposal. Instead, he undertook to "start a campaign against war guilt." It had no immediate success. After the signing of the peace treaty he returned to journalism as a profession. But this was "from time to time interrupted by undercover missions." Mr. Cahen describes himself as a bourgeois democrat by conviction, neither Communist nor Nazi; but he does not seem to see anything inimical to "bourgeois" political institutions in such an identity of direct political activity and journalism. This attitude, which is obviously maintained in all honesty, else he would not give the facts, sheds a sidelight on the failure of the German Republic. After all, habits of thought are not changed overnight; the genuine republican mind had never developed in Germany.

GERMANS looked to the state for everything—it did not matter whether they were monarchists, Socialists, workingmen or big industrialists. Rathenau, too, was all for the state. When everyone thinks along those lines, the struggle is simply for power—which clique can get hold of the power of the state.

A journalist then will tie his journalism to the state. A labor party will go along with big business for the same hook-up. But no matter who gets to it first, the army will become the state, being the physical body of power. Yet this inevitable outcome is still so far from being realized in Germany, where it is a demonstrated fact, that Mr. Cahen quotes, in good faith and no doubt correctly, the remark of a democratic deputy in the Prussian Diet, and editor of a Berlin newspaper: "Even if it does not please us, I prefer the army as dictator to a Hitlerian state. The army is our guaranty at present." This was soon after Hindenburg's election.

Mr. Cahen says he then foresaw Hitler's rise to power, and therefore began to organize for underground opposition, knowing that no other form of opposition would be possible. He left Germany, barely in time, in 1933. He has since been busy getting propaganda into Germany, by means of the secret organization, and getting information out. The "program" includes "the slow preparation for revolution" and "absolute obedience to the directing force of the party." It sounds depressingly like all the other forms of absolutism. The author rejects the accusation of being "dictatorial," with this statement: "The method succeeded because of this consideration only; to secure the most safety possible for each participant by limiting the personal acquaintance of each." One may credit the motive fully; but the training will be the same. And Mr. Cahen explains that many of the participants necessarily belong to the Nazi party, though "this was a great spiritual sacrifice. Some are in the inner circle."

MR. CAHEN believes that "inside Germany at least 50 per cent of the population is in complete disaccord with nearly everything that Hitler stands for." But when the German revolution comes, it will be from the top, and not from the bottom. At least, if the revolution comes before war." From "inside information," he also believes that the army (meaning the commanders, apparently) will simply join the winning side; which sounds complicated and difficult.

But if Nazism wins an international war, it will be "followed by a crash worse than any defeat in war . . . a long era of local revolutions . . . the dark ages."

There is not much cheer in the sketch of one German secret revolutionary, an "organizer" who lived for nothing else, and was proud of his card index of revolutionary agents.

Will Chamberlain Find Him A Place?

IF WORDS have any meaning, there should be no question in the minds of Hitler or anyone else as to what Great Britain will do in the event of a new German aggression in Europe.

It is generally agreed that the uncertainty of the Brit' position in 1914 encouraged Germany in the fatal belief that Great Britain would remain on the sidelines when the showdown came.

British leaders are not making the same ghastly mistake now. Prime Minister Chamberlain, Foreign Secretary Halifax and other members of the British cabinet have again and again declared, and never more strongly than during the past week, that Great Britain will unhesitatingly and unreservedly throw her full weight on the side of Poland should that country become the victim of a Nazi aggression.

HAVE THESE statements had any effect on the Fuehrer? Perhaps. But there is no evidence of it. So far the Third Reich has refrained from laying violent hands on Danzig and the Corridor. But Nazi preparations for a coup in the Free City and its ultimate incorporation in the Reich show not the slightest letup.

It may be that Hitler is determined to go ahead no matter what happens. Perhaps he reckons that war is sooner or later inevitable, and that it is better to have it now, when German preparations are at their peak, when the peace front which Great Britain has created to bar further aggressions is still a loose and uncoordinated and incomplete coalition and when a powerful element in the Congress of the United States is manifesting a disposition to pass neutrality legislation favorable to the enemies of peace and freedom in Europe.

It is much more likely, however, that the Fuehrer is persuaded that the British are bluffing and that, in the final test, they will back down, leaving Poland to the tender mercies of the Third Reich.

UNJUSTIFIED as this attitude may prove to be, the important thing is that Hitler and some of his closest advisers, such as Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop, appear to subscribe to it. Before their minds are disabused of this illusion the prestige of the Nazi regime may be so thoroughly committed that a retreat may become impossible.

That is what happened to Germany in 1914 when, as Britain's ultimate role became clear, the Kaiser sought desperately and vainly to recall the blank check he gave Austria-Hungary. There is no certainty that history will not repeat itself and war may be the result not of deliberate intention but of a bluff that did not work.

To more and more Englishmen, therefore, one of the most pressing tasks facing the British government is to make it unmistakably clear to Hitler that the road he appears to be following leads not to Munich but to Armageddon.

For this reason there is overwhelming support in favor of an Anglo-Russian alliance on almost any terms. And for the same reason newspapers as diverse in their political coloring as the Conservative Daily Telegraph, the Liberal Manchester Guardian, the formerly pro-Hitler Daily Mail and the pro-Eden Yorkshire Post are now insisting that Winston Churchill be included in the British cabinet.

THERE IS NO man in the United Kingdom who has had broader or more extensive experience in public affairs than this scion of the great Duke of Marlborough. A member of Parliament, off and on, for 30 years, he has been, at one time or another, president of the board of trade, home secretary, war secretary, first lord of the admiralty, minister of munitions, minister of air, colonial minister and chancellor of the exchequer.

It is not because of his experience, however, that his friends and admirers want him in the cabinet. It is because no individual in British public life more definitely symbolizes opposition to aggression than he. And none has been more critical of the policy of appeasement. That is why he has been a constant thorn in the flesh of Neville Chamberlain. And that is also why he is and for a long time has been Adolf Hitler's particular bete noire among British statesmen.

In a speech at Saarbrucken, only a few days after the Munich settlement, Hitler took occasion to pay his respects to the British Conservatives who had criticized the action taken by the Chamberlain government.

"We must be aware," he said, "that at any moment a Chamberlain could be succeeded by an Eden, a Duff Cooper or a Churchill. If these men were to obtain power we would know clearly and beyond doubt that their aim would be to unleash immediately a world war against Germany. They do not even hide their ambitions. . . ."

BY HITLER'S own admission, therefore, the inclusion of Churchill in the British government should be very convincing evidence that Great Britain means business, that a return to appeasement is definitely out of the question.

Will Chamberlain bring Churchill in? To do so would mean his own eclipse. Churchill is a man of such brilliance as inevitably to throw the present collection of mediocrities in the British cabinet into deep obscurity. But no step could be more salutary for Great Britain and for Europe's peace than that.

A Conservative of deepest dye, Churchill differs from many of his fellow Tories by belonging to the old-fashioned bulldog breed. At a time when other Conservatives were permitting considerations of empire to be overshadowed by sentiments of class, Churchill hewed to the traditional line. And no man has been more prophetically right.

Senate Group Votes to Modernize 5 Battleships

The Senate Naval Committee yesterday voted to partially modernize five battleships and curb subversive activities in the naval service.

Legislation imposing a fine of $1,000 and imprisonment for one to two years for any person inciting officers and men of the Navy to disobey orders was approved at a session of the committee called to wind up several "loose ends" of the rearmament program. The bill is designed to stop Communists from distributing literature advocating mutiny and disobedience of orders, naval officers told the committee.

The battleship reconditioning measure already has been passed by the House.

A total of $8,850,000 would be expended for new installations and repairs on the battleships Tennessee, California, Colorado, Maryland and West Virginia, under the bill. Rear Admiral William DuBose told the committee a complete modernization of the ships would cost $15,000,000 each, but that the Navy did not want to undertake such a program, because of the time and expense involved.

D. C. Heads Oppose Retirement Plan

District Commissioners yesterday opposed a proposed bill to permit members of the Metropolitan, Park or White House police forces to retire at half pay after 25 years of service. Policeman could retire at their own volition under the proposal.

In a letter to Chairman Randolph, of the House District Committee, the Commissioners said the present law was adequate and that they were against the proposal for police to retire at their own election. Furthermore, they emphasized, firemen are not included in the bill.

The Commissioners also sent to Congress a proposed bill which would extend from 30 to 60 days the time for filing an application with the tax collector for refunds on gasoline.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

Baccalaureate For 1939

Gentlemen of the Graduating Class:

Today you stop fooling and face facts. In another few hours you will have concluded your preparations here and begun wondering what to do next. Yours is the tenth class to be graduated into a blind alley; this is the tenth anniversary of the year when everything went black.

Within these ivied walls you have spent four years acquiring knowledge. Do not let the fact so little of it is being used today discourage you. Under the shade of these old elms you have been putting on the armor necessary for the battle of life. Do not be upset by the fact that all around you today you see people using easily penetrated substitutes.

You are, I think, a little lucky. The worst must be nearly over. After ten long years the law of averages would seem to offer hope of an early return to the bright era when a youth with an education could look forward to some job other than that of a lifeguard, movie usher, magician's assistant or amateur golfer. Who knows but what, within the year, something will happen to give the lie to the claim that the last college grad to get into the big money was Rudy Vallee?

Your class at least has the comforting realization that there will soon be another national election, and that you can pretty well tell from the result what to expect for the following four years. If Roosevelt wins again, my advice is for you to turn Democratic and swim with the tide. If a Republican is elected, my advice is to regard it as a miracle, ask no questions, and anticipate some favorable replies to your letters written in answer to "Help—Wanted—Male" advertisements.

The only fields of endeavor offering any returns today to a young college grad are Escort Service Bureau, the radio quiz programs and the summer resort archery courses. But things have got to pick up.

There is life in the old system yet; the cry of "Help—Wanted—Male!" will one day ring out again in America, and the time is near—I hope, I hope, I hope—when the fact that you have been able to go through college will not incite jealousy, derision, contempt or indignation.

It is the custom at these exercises to emphasize honesty, and this year, more than ever, it will impress you as not being a matter of platitudes. Enough educated men have been jailed for dishonesty in the past six months in this country to leave many openings in the high places of public responsibility and trust. If the campaign continues, the unemployment crisis will have been broken.

All in all, the outlook is not dismal. I cannot say that the world is calling to you; but I can say that it is beginning to look in your direction. Clear thinking, intellectual integrity and a desire to get ahead in life are not the handicaps they have been for the last seven years. The dawn is breaking? Or is somebody in the third row using a flashlight?

The Radio Plays a Trick On Author James Hilton

Novelist's Youth Belied by the Loudspeaker; Producer Considine Coming Here for Research; This, That and the Other About the Theater

THOSE WHO LISTENED to "The Circle" broadcast from Hollywood last Sunday night heard James Hilton, famous British novelist, as guest star, along with Madeleine Carroll, Lawrence Tibbett, Groucho and Chico Marx and the other regulars. There was that about Mr. Hilton's voice and manner of speech that may have given others the impression, as it did this desk, that Mr. Hilton must be an older man than had been supposed. That must have been one of the unaccountable tricks sometimes played on unsuspecting victims by the ether waves.

BELL

James Hilton was born in Lancashire, England in 1900. He attended Christ College, Cambridge, and was graduated at the age of 20 with a B. A. degree in both history and English. He has been writing since boyhood, his first book having been accepted and published while he still was an undergraduate. That was "Catherine Herself," written at the age of 17 and published two years later. His first published article appeared in the Manchester Guardian while he was still 17.

A novel, "And Now Goodbye" (1931), brought in his first substantial returns, but what Mr. Hilton terms his "real stroke of luck" came when he was commissioned by the editor of a famous British weekly to write a long short story for a special Christmas supplement, to be completed in a fortnight. Inspiration would not come. Then one morning, while he was out bicycling, it did. "Goodbye, Mr. Chips" was finished in four days. Within a year it was a best-seller on two continents and Hilton was established, at the age of 33, at the top of his profession.

This is the "Goodbye, Mr. Chips," of course, that will be presented in film form on the screen at Loew's Palace Theater, beginning this morning, with Robert Donat and Greer Garson in the leading roles. We already have gone on record as coinciding with the view of Alexander Woollcott that this is one of the finest motion pictures ever made. There will be more about it on this page Friday morning in the form of a review—just as a friendly warning.

No Stranger to Screen

Mr. Hilton, needless to say, is not a newcomer to the cinema. His "Lost Horizon" was made into a successful screen fantasy by Frank Capra and his "Knight Without Armor" has been seen, long since, by Washington audiences, with Marlene Dietrich and Robert Donat in the principal roles, if memory serves.

Just now, Mr. Hilton is on the Warner Brothers lot making the film adaptation of his own novel of "We Are Not Alone," in which Paul Muni will be the star. Mr. Hilton says, somewhat superfluously, that Mr. Muni will be very good in the stellar part.

I still wonder why a youngster under 40 should have sounded so much older than that over the air. Maybe he didn't. It might be my ears.

Yesterday's caller at the drama desk was our old friend, Eddie Rosenbaum, son of the veteran showman who, up to the time of his death, always was company manager for the "Ziegfeld Follies." Eddie is in town in the interest of "Clouds Over Europe"—and there seem to be plenty of them—coming to the screen at RKO-Keith's Theater in the near future. Something of the quality of the picture may be gained from the fact that the principal roles in it are played by Laurence Olivier, who created such a stir in "Wuthering Heights" and then went on to play opposite Katharine Cornell in "No Time for Comedy," on Broadway; Ralph Richardson and Valerie Hobson. However, we will know more about that following the preview screening arranged for the drama desks on next Monday at 1.

Early next week—Tuesday or Wednesday, according to the most reliable advance guesses—Washington will play host to a group of distinguished Hollywoodites. John Considine, one of the West Coast's ace producers, is coming to town with three Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer writers to do research work on his projected camera study of "The Life of Thomas A. Edison."

Mr. Considine's name has sponsored many fine productions emanating from the M-G-M lot, one of the most memorable being "Boys Town." It is expected that after he arrives here he will disclose details of his plans for filming the life story of the "Wizard of Menlo Park," which should be one of the most important films of the year.

Helen Twelvetrees, noted star of the screen and stage, who is appearing this week as first of the season's guest stars, in "Twin Beds," at the Olney Theater, yesterday was guest at a tea in her honor given by the Newspaper Women's Club in the Raleigh Hotel from 4:30 to 6 p. m. It is one of the regrets of a soggy July that the peak load of our day is reached at precisely those hours and we were, therefore, unable to be present to meet in person one of the theater's most charming young actresses.

That enterprising independent, Sidney B. Lust, is going in for stage entertainment as well as pictures, in his string of theaters more or less encircling the Capital. Tonight and tomorrow night, at the Milo Theater in Rockville, the Emerson Mountaineers will be presented twice each evening, in addition to the regular screen bill, featuring Nelson Eddy in "Let Freedom Ring." The Emerson Mountaineers are a group of five hillbilly musicians who really make music. They are reputedly on their way to New York to appear in television engagements.

Tomorrow night at the Boro Theater, Bethesda, the stage attraction, in conjunction with an all-comedy screen bill, will be the Cabin Kids, the pickaninnies who appeared in the motion picture, "Mississippi." They will go on at 7:15 and 9:15 p. m.

"The March of Freedom," an unusual and timely featurette, has been added to the bill opening tomorrow at RKO-Keith's with "Career" as its major feature. The added attraction is a compendium of newsreel shots covering the past two decades and more, with Graham McNamee as narrator. It deals with the growth of Americas' greatness.

An A. B. & W. bus will leave the corner of Eleventh street and Pennsylvania for the Cross Roads Theater every night at 7:30 during the engagement of Izetta Jewel, jr., in "Biography," returning to town immediately after the performance.

Little

"South Riding" yesterday entered its second week at the Little Theater. This is an unusual film, in a quietly comprehensive vein, of life in England's most northern county, Yorkshire. The characters are those concerned with making the laws for one of the three divisions of the county and with those who are affected by those laws.

Adapted from Winifred Holtby's novel of the same name, the film handles its complexity of characters with a caution that, in the long run, makes for clarity. A landed patrician, with his property and family falling into ruin, is the central figure. He struggles to quash a bill, introduced in the county council as a social measure, but which actually is backed by selfish politicians. His helper in this fight is the young schoolmistress of the village and the other figures of the story are members of the county council.

Ralph Richardson, Edna Best, Marie Lohr, Edmund Gwenn, John Clements and Ann Todd are the leading players in this Alexander Korda presentation, which Victor Saville directed.

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

LOUELLA PARSONS

Years ago, when the agile Douglas, Fairbanks, Sr., was jumping over houses and slaying whole armies single-handed, he was Doug's art director on "The Thief of Bagdad." Tomorrow, Bill leaves for London to act as director on Alexander Korda's remake of "The Thief." Only this time, he will not only enhance the effects, but will be the sole director.

Some months ago we printed that Jon Hall would be loaned to Korda by Samuel Goldwyn, but recent business difficulties between Merle Oberon's bridegroom and her boss make this deal a dead issue. However, Sabu, the Indian star, and, possibly Rex Ingram, the negro actor, will carry on. One of the most beautiful pictures ever made, Technicolor ought to add to the charm of this delightful fantasy.

The historic Chaplin studio on La Brea is a beehive of activity, with all Charlie's old gang rallying around him. He and Paulette Goddard are the only ones working and today they made tests, with Charlie paying particular heed to voice recordings. Since "The Dictators" is the first picture in which he talks, he is particularly anxious to have his voice register correctly and, considering the pleasant quality of the Chaplin voice off-screen, that shouldn't be difficult. Meanwhile, there is a rumor that either Fanny Brice, Patsy Kelly or Beatrice Lillie will be selected for the dictator's wife, so you can see, with these three comediennes under consideration, the lady will be funny.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: The Harold Andersons (he is Gloria Somborn's new father-in-law) have dated the stork; like old times to see Joan Bennett and Walter Wanger dancing together. They were stepping out with Constance Bennett and Gilbert Roland at the Troc; Billie Seward's new heartbeat is Jack Emanuel, New York broker; Norman Krasna, who looks younger every day, is now spending his free moments with Margot Stevenson; Nancy Carroll is back among us and Charles Grayson couldn't be happier. She wired the Beverly Hills Hotel, "I tum home." Must be the three little fishies' influence; the Ralph Blums (Carmel Myers) celebrated the Fourth with a beach party of 60 or 70; Ben Bard's niece, Myrtle, reaches here this week to marry David Arlen, a Hollywood P. A.; Jockey Westrope spent the evening at the wrestling matches by reading the Racing Form.

The Everett Riskins are giving Bob a plantation party Saturday night, which will have a "G. W. T. W." flavor. The ladies are asked to come in white and the men will wear costumes of the Civil War period, or just plain tuxedos. Bob leaves for Norway next week; the Andsea Leeds-Bob Howard combination is now in its second week; Gilbert Miller taken on a round of the night clubs by Ernst Lubitsch before he went to Santa Barbara; a baseball missed its aim and hit Bob Cobb, owner of the Hollywood Star, in the jaw—and believe Bob, its painful; June Lang and Joe Pasternak a duet at Earl Carroll's. Carroll is telling friends he may take his entire Hollywood show to New York as a part of the new "Vanities" he is producing on Broadway.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

With Hedda Hopper

(While Hedda Hopper is on vacation, her column is being written for her by her friends.)

By Lillian K. Deighton.

"Hedda, what a nerve! Just as I was hanging up my 'BUSY' sign over the entrance to the research department at Selznick, you call and say: 'Will you do a column for me?'"

"What would I write about?"

"Anything! Turn your soul inside out!"

"I'm not a propagandist. I'm a fact-finder."

"Then air your pet peeve."

"I'm busy! On tag ends for 'Gone with the Wind,' 'Intermezzo' and just beginning on 'Rebecca.'"

"Darling, I'm going vacationing. And I must arrange for my guest

So, here am I at 5 a. m. Sunday, wondering what will interest you. But as lots of people ask me about research work, I'm going to give a mass answer.

Why do studios have those departments? To help make realistic pictures, to authenticate their pictures so spectators will be lost in an illusion of reality.

Never let a spectator become conscious of a single anachronism, such as having a radio in 1890, or as minute as the New York City insignia on the buttons of an 1880 Brooklyn policeman's uniform. If you do, fan forgets the picture and plans his "boner" letter to the producer, starting it with "What's wrong with your research department?"

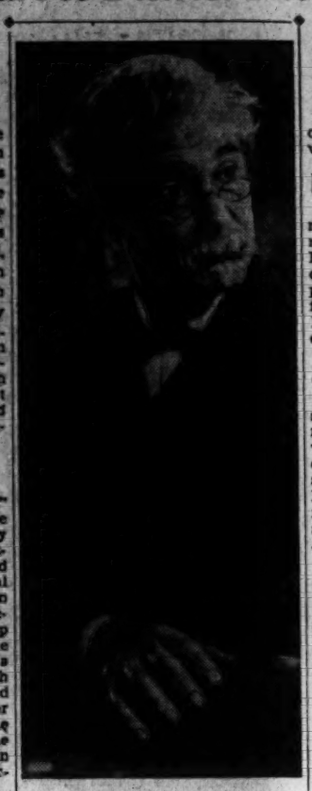
Do you get all your information from your own library? No one library is a depository of universal knowledge. The public library, university, medical, law and special libraries all assist us. Museums, travel agencies, railroads, steamship companies, newspaper morgues, one and all give of their fund of knowledge when we query them. Our thanks to them this day and every day!

Do you enjoy your work? Immensely. It's hectic, because of the time element, but always interesting. Each request is a challenge to the non-defeatist spirit which animates every worker.

Some of your most interesting recent requests? A director in "Gone with the Wind" wanted to know if he could show Negro boys shooting craps. In a new dictionary founded on historical principles we found the game had been introduced in New Orleans in 1843, that some Negroes in 1852 were discovered playing the game in a shanty, and the game had been quite popular in Boston in 1859.

Five New Films Are Billed for Coming Week; Offer Varied Fare to District Theatergoers

Robert Donat in 'Goodbye Mr. Chips' To Show at Palace



Robert Donat as "Mr. Chips"

"GOODBYE, MR. CHIPS." The spectacularly successful novel of an English schoolmaster, by James Hilton, is brought to the Palace screen, with Robert Donat in the title role. From his earliest days as a junior master in the school, through the brief marriage which developed him from a shy youth into an alert instructor, to the very last years of a long life, this character has won the hearts of fiction lovers the world over. Donat, recalled for his memorable work in "The Citadel," is supported by a cast that includes Greer Garson and Terry Kilburn. Opens this morning.

Earle

"DAUGHTERS COURAGEOUS." The stars of "Four Daughters" are reunited, with the addition of Fay Bainter, as the girls' mother. On the Earle stage "Lake Placid Ice Show" is a revue entirely on ice skates, with Pierre Brunet, Andree Joly, Ted Maza, Sonia and Margo, Dick Salter and Al Clark. The influences which a philosophical country store-keeper exerts on the romance of two of his fellow townspeople is threaded into the story of this film, featuring Anne Sheridan and Edward Ellis. Also in the company are Alice Eden and John Archer, finalists in the "Gateway to Hollywood" talent search. Mr. Ellis and Miss Sheridan are recalled for their excellent work in "A Man to Remember." Samuel S. Hinds, Janet Beecher and Leon Errol are others in this film, which was directed by Leigh Jason. Opens tomorrow.

"STRONGER THAN DESIRE." Blackmail and murder in New York's society life is the theme of this courtroom drama, co-starring Virginia Bruce and Walter Pidgeon. When the prosperous lawyer's wife suspects her husband of a flirtation, she embarks on one of her own, and that involves them in murder. Ann Dvorak, Ilka Chase, Rita Johnson, Lee Bowman, Richard Lane and Margaret Burt have other leading roles. "Slap-Happiness" is the Capitol's stage show, with radio's "The Kidoodlers;" Bea Saxon, the popular blues singer; Walter Dare Wahl, Carlton Emmy and the Six Grays embracing the list of performers. Opens tomorrow.

Columbia

"INVITATION TO HAPPINESS." Another boxing story, this one with a serious angle, the Columbia's new feature, returns after an engagement at the Palace. Irene Dunne and Fred MacMurray are co-starred. MacMurray is a young fighter, consumed with a desire to become heavyweight champion of the world, and Miss Dunne is the wealthy girl who marries him. How they have to struggle through ten years to keep this marriage alive forms the novel twist of the plot. Charlie Ruggles, Billy Cook, William Collier, sr., and Marion Martin are featured. Opens tomorrow.

Olney

Senate Stands by Bigger D. C. Fund

trict revenue bill to conference, Senator Overton stated that he would call another conference with the House today.

At the same time Chairman Randolph, of the House District Committee, informed Overton of his willingness to resume parleys in an effort to work out a compromise, although two of the House managers, Representative Nichols (Democrat), of Oklahoma, and Dirksen (Republican), of Illinois, are out of the city.

Senator Overton, while determined to carry on the fight with renewed vigor, indicated he is still willing to accept the compromise he offered the House managers last week. This would be a substitution of a flat 16 per cent Federal payment for the land ratio formula.

The compromise would give the District approximately $6,500,000, if written into the supply bill as well as the revenue measure, instead of about $8,000,000 were the 20 per cent proportion of the original Senate bill applied to the District's general revenue fund.

Chairman Collins, of the House sub-committee on District appropriations, meanwhile stated that he had no intention of offering a continuing resolution despite the Senate and House deadlock.

"Nobody wants a continuing resolution," he said. "It is doubtful whether the District could legally collect taxes under such a law. Besides, we would have to write in some kind of a Federal payment to give the District enough money to operate on until September, and if we can't agree in the supply bill, how can we agree in a continuing resolution?"

As to the lump-sum controversy, Collins smiled and observed that the House had twice voted decisively against any increase above $5,000,000. The votes were 216 to 12 and 223 to 20.

"The House has spoken," said Collins, "and it's out of my hands."

An unusual legislative situation may arise if the House conferees on the revenue bill agree to a larger lump sum, and the House managers on the supply measure refuse to yield. The revenue measure can only authorize the payment, whereas the appropriations bill carries the actual money.

Senator Overton, in asking for a vote to send the tax bill back to conference, explained to the Senate that the lump sum authorization is the only point in serious disagreement although the House voted for an income tax and the Senate for renewal of the business-privilege levy.

"The Senate is willing to meet the House halfway," Overton added. "We have great respect for the views of the House, but the House also should have respect for the views of the Senate."

When asked by Senator Byrnes what may happen to the District if no agreement is reached by July 15, Senator Overton said:

"I'm assuming that the House is willing to go as far as we hope in settling this controversy."

Senator McCarran (Democrat), of Nevada, one of the Senate managers, lauded Overton for his work in behalf of the District and his conception of the land ratio fiscal formula.

"There never has been worked out a system which settles this issue with more propriety and equity than the formula proposed by the able Senator from Louisana," he said.

Senator Austin (Republican), of Vermont, by questioning indicated he would oppose any compromise that scrapped the Overton formula.

Senator Ellender arose as if to speak just before the vote was taken but at a glance from Overton took his seat. Later he explained to newspaper men that only his respect for his colleague prevented him from making a fight against the Overton plan from the beginning.

News Club Fetes Helen Twelvetrees

Stage and Film Star Tells of Her Career At Club Tea, Held In Raleigh Hotel

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor

Taking time out from rehearsals, Helen Twelvetrees, who is playing at Olney this week, came in yesterday to be guest of honor at a tea given by the Newspaper Women's Club of Washington. Off the stage, as on, she did it graciously and won her "audience" with the first smile.

The informal party was at the Raleigh Hotel, where the club has its headquarters, with Miss Helene Kravatz as hostess. Miss Katharine Brooks, the club president, also welcomed the guests.

Miss Twelvetrees wore a small black straw hat, a short red jacket over a white blouse, and a pleated black skirt striped in white. She chatted with the newspaper women and their guests about Hollywood in general and, pinned down to it, was persuaded to tell something of her own career. After appearing in the stage successes, "An American Tragedy" and "Elmer Gantry," she began playing in pictures. She says it's been ten years. But, when you look at her, you know it can't have been that long!

This is the first time since she went to Hollywood that she has been in a stage production, and she is enjoying it.

While other guests drank iced tea, Miss Twelvetrees took hot coffee. She would have had two cups if it hadn't been for the clock. Just as she was about to take the second, somebody reminded her it was nearly 6, with hasty good-byes, she was off to prepare for the evening performance at Olney.

Steve Cochran, owner of the theater, accompanied her to the tea as did Wally Gould, who is here from Hollywood. Mr. Gould has been associated with the motion picture industry as actor, producer or playwright since he was 6 years old, and his grandfather, collaborating with Thomas Edison, produced the first motion picture.

He comes to Washington frequently to do research for plays at the Library of Congress. Since last October, he and his associates have been assembling material for a film on the life of Horace Greeley, which he expects to have ready for production by next summer.

Among the guests of club members yesterday were Miss Harriet Whitford, Mrs. Susan Kintner, Mrs. Ethel Fistere, Mrs. Kenneth Watson, Miss Ann Gillis and Miss Ellen Ramsey, who were entertained by Miss Kravatz; Mrs. Charles H. Ruth, the guest of Miss Ellen De Sayn; Mrs. Alexander Jamison, of Wilmington, Del., and Mrs. Frank Dill, of Pittsburg, and Jacksonville, Fla., who were the guests of Mrs. Kate Scott Brooks. Mrs. Jamison, the former Margaret Gilbert, came to Washington last week-end.

Mrs. Charles Shepperson, of Alexandria, Va., for many years Alexandria correspondent for The Post, had as her guests, her daughter, Gene, and two of her schoolmates from Stuart Hall, Miss Elsie Garvin, of Charles Town, Va., and Miss Ruth Powell, of Iloilo, Philippine Islands.

Service Council Plans Formal

A summer formal will be held at the National Women's Country Club on Tuesday evening, July 18, by the Service Council of the Jewish Community Center. Mrs. Betty Kronman Shapiro is chairman of the committee. Attendance will be by invitation from Service Council members.

The program committee, with Mrs. Ponorow as chairman, announces a busy slate for the next season. At least one social activity is planned for each month in addition to open meetings. Members of the organization will be asked for suggestions as to future activities. Dancing will be a regular feature after each open meeting.

William Foreman has been named chairman of a summer outing tentatively set for Sunday, August 20, at Chapel Point. More definite plans will be announced later.

Zonta Creates Air Scholarship For Women

Awards for Research To Honor Miss Earhart, Member of Society

Scholarships for research in aeronautics will be awarded to women by Zonta International from a fund established in memory of its most distinguished member, Amelia Earhart, Miss Mary Sigman, president of the local club, told its members yesterday in her report of the recent convention at White Sulphur Springs, W. Va.

Under the chairmanship of Dr. Dorothy McSparron Arnold, dean of women at New York University, a survey of schools offering courses in aeronautics to women has been made, and eight schools approved, said Miss Sigman. They are the University of Alabama, University of California, Georgia Tech, Purdue, Universities of Michigan, Minnesota and Wisconsin. Women are welcome in their graduate schools for research in plane designing, in the designing of parts, research in new materials, for preparation as technical librarians and the study of aeronautical law.

The patience and attention to detail characteristic of women fits them peculiarly for such work, Dr. Arnold pointed out, said Miss Sigman. The convention voted to award the scholarships as gifts rather than loans. One $500 scholarship will be awarded each year if an outstanding applicant is found. When none qualifies, the scholarship will be held until the following year when two may be awarded.

Miss Sigman's report included the announcement of the formation of new Zonta clubs in the last year in St. Louis, Salt Lake City, Phoenix, Ariz.; El Paso, Tex., and Hackensack, N. J.

The local club is carrying on a service program in line with those of others throughout the country, she said, putting stress on vocational guidance. The Washington Zontians have given assistance to 11 young women in preparation for business and professional careers, through its permanent work fund. Eighty clubs are doing similar work.

Mrs. Marion Hines Taylor presided at yesterday's meeting while the president presented her report. The guests included Miss Mildred Frisk, formerly a Zontian of Moline, Ill., and now a resident of Washington, who was the guest of Miss Ruth Sheldon; Miss Margaret Young, a niece of Dr. Mildred Dickerson and Miss Joanne Byers Clare, a niece of Mrs. Frances Gutelius Smith, who is here from Newtonville, Mass., after having finished her premedical course at Wellesley.

'Good-by Party' to Henry F. Gradys Sets New Post-Fourth High

By Hope Ridings Miller,
The Post Society Editor.

DYNAMIC Lucretia del Valle Grady (Mrs. Henry F. Grady) who numbers her Washington friends by the dozens and who is known and beloved far and wide on many accounts, was guest of honor yesterday at a farewell luncheon that set something of a record in summertime entertaining.

Harris & Ewing.
leaving . . .

Hostess for the event was Miss Minne Mae Fleming, who hails from Texas but spends several months out of each year in Washington, making her home while here at the Shoreham, where she entertained yesterday. The party was a good-by-for-a-while fete, as Mrs. Grady will leave today with Dr. Grady and their pretty daughter, Patricia, for an across-the-country motor trip that will be generally punctuated with visits and speech-making in a number of cities from here to the West Coast, and back again.

A vice-chairman of the Democratic national committee, Mrs. Grady is primed on plenty of politically important subjects, which she can discuss in a manner that makes audiences sit up and take notice. Dr. Grady, who is vice chairman of the United States Tariff Commission, is widely sought as a lecturer on topics related to trade agreements. Their attractive daughter, who will return to her studies at the University of California next September, has been doing professional radio work as a sideline for some time and is quite a speaker herself.

Patricia to Remain At Coast College

On this trip, however, her place will be in the audience—not on the platform. She will accompany her parents on their northern tour to California, be with them most of the time during their West Coast stay and then remain on until time for school to begin.

Just being on hand to hear her mother and father speak will be quite a feat for her, or anybody else, in several instances—for example, both Dr. Grady and his wife are scheduled for two speeches each, in one day, in San Francisco. Other parts of their schedules are just about as crowded. So by the time they return to Washington in August both will probably be ready for a long rest.

Was Exceptional Post-Fourth Party

BUT BACK TO yesterday's party. I have said it was a record breaker . . . and it was. Generally speaking, Washington's social events boil down to a negative quantity for several days after July the Fourth, and rare indeed is the person with enough courage or ability to whip up a ladies' luncheon of any size or importance around this time. But Miss Fleming's party yesterday was of sizable proportions, exceptionally successful and nicely studded with social lights.

As a pleasant prelude for the luncheon, cocktails were served in the Garbo Room, where the hostess, Mrs. Grady, and Patricia received informally. Both Miss Fleming and her guest of honor had chosen blue and white ensembles, the shades almost alike, and both as near that of the Texas Bluebonnet as anything I've seen lately. Might have been a cause for that—Miss Fleming is a native of Texas, and still calls Dallas home. Mrs. Grady has a host of friends in the Lone Star State and will stop over in Dallas for a speaking engagement on her way back to Washington.

LUNCHEON WAS served in the Louis Seize Room. Three low, rectangular vases filled with yellow roses and delphinium, ranging from powder blue to purple adorned the table at which the company was seated.

Vacation plans made up most of the table talk, with almost everybody present either tripping off soon or have just returned. A few, however, in the midst of all the touring charts being described, cheerfully announced they expected to be in Washington all summer. Mme. Emmanuel Lombard was in this group; also, Mrs. Brent Clark, Mrs. Leverett S. Lyon, and Mrs. Blair Banister.

MRS. D. WORTH CLARK, who was trimly turned out in a pink and black ensemble, said she had no definite plans for the summer and did not expect to make any until the Senate decides school is out. Mrs. Luther A. Johnson is another Congressional hostess who will stay right on in Washington until adjournment, and probably longer. She admits she likes the Capital any time, even during its most torrid season.

Wife of Canadian Attache to Go North

On the other hand, Mrs. Walter A. Riddell, wife of the Canadian Charge d'Affairs, has her eye on a cooler climate for the forthcoming weeks and will leave soon for a vacation in the North. Mrs. Mordecai Ezekiel and her husband will leave Sunday for a two months' stay in the West. Another of yesterday's guests who will soon head for California is Mrs. Francis Cabell Brown, who will be a guest of Mrs. Frank H. Buck during her Western sojourn.

OTHERS AT THE luncheon were Mrs. Ellen S. Woodward, Mrs. Thomas F. McAllister, Mrs. Wallace McClure, Mrs. Henry L. Deimel, jr., sister-in-law of Mrs. Grady; Mrs. Samuel Herrick, Mrs. Harold G. Bowen, Mrs. J. Fred Essary, Mrs. Louis G. Caldwell, whose chief interest at present is restoring to its former glory a community down in Virginia, but who will leave that project behind sometime soon when she goes to Mexico City for a visit with friends; Mrs. Donald Balisdell, Mrs. Charles J. Brand, Mrs. Bulkley Griffin, Mrs. Carroll Stewart, Mrs. Basil Manly, Mrs. Mary V. Johnson, who will sail August 7 for a vacation abroad, and Dr. Esther Brunauer.

The party was held at Mrs. Summerlin's apartment, 1302 Eighteenth street. Mr. Hirst is the son of Dr. Jesse Watson Hirst and the late Mrs. Hirst.

Their marriage took place at the Presbyterian Church in Gap, Pa., the Rev. Lynn Boyd Rankin officiating at the ceremony, which was witnessed by relatives and close friends. Mrs. Lynn Boyd Rankin, sister of Mr. Hirst, was matron of honor, and Donald Hirst was best man for his brother.

The bride studied at Shorter College, where she was a member of the Eumonian Society, and for the past year has been connected with the Maritime Labor Board in Washington. Mr. Hirst received his early education in Seoul, Korea, where his father was personal physician to the former Emperor of Korea, and at Phillips Academy, Andover, Mass. William Wilkerson Wilbourne, U. S. N. Announcement of their engagement was made known yesterday by the parents of the bride-to-be.

Only members of the two families will witness the ceremony, which will take place at the residence of the bride's uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Albert P. Gerhard, of Overbrook, Pa. John R. Wilbourne, of Marion, Ala., will be best man for his brother, and Mrs. Y. F. Hardcastle, jr., will be the bride's only attendant. Mrs. Hardcastle was before her marriage last winter Miss Edith Beardall and is the daughter of Capt. John Beardall, former aide to Secretary of the Navy Claude A. Swanson, and Mrs. Beardall.

The future bride attended the Masters School at Dobbs Ferry, N. Y., and is a member of the Society of Sponsors, having christened the U. S. S. Rowan, named for her great-grandfather, the late Admiral Stephen C. Rowan.

Miss Harriet Webster Dawley, whose mother, Mrs. Marion Webster Dawley, presented her to society last Saturday, was the guest in whose honor Claude Kettle Hydrick entertained last evening at dinner at the Shoreham Hotel.

Mr. Hydrick, son of Mr. and Mrs. Onan A. Hydrick, a student at the Florida Military Academy, is spending his vacation in Washington with his parents.

Miss Dawley will leave next week with her mother and her sister, Miss Gail Dawley, for their summer home in Narragansett, R. I.

Crown Prince Wins Holiday Sailing Race Off Marblehead

Crown Prince Olav and Crown Princess Martha, of Norway, will sail from New York for Norway today after a visit of two months through the United States. They will be accompanied by members of their party and by Ditleft Knudsen, former Secretary of the Norwegian legation, who, with his bride, is going from Norway to Turkey for his new post.

Members of Capital society were interested to learn that the Crown Prince had won the sailing races off Marblehead, Mass., July 4, at the helm of the Moose, 30-footer belonging to John S. Lawrence, of Boston and Topsfield, Mass. Mr. Lawrence is well known in Washington, where he frequently visits, and his son, Amory Lawrence, has made his home here since becoming a correspondent for the Boston Transcript several years ago.

Simplicity was the keynote of the wedding at 10 o'clock yesterday morning of Miss Lillian Maud Morck, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Paul I. Morck, of Jamestown, N. Dak., to John Louis Cassullo, son of Mrs. Prisca Marino, of Coronado, Calif.

The ceremony took place at St. Ann's rectory, the Rev. Russell A. Phelan officiating. The bride, who was given in marriage by her brother, Albert Morck, wore a frock of white silk jersey with a sheer plaited bodice, widely girdled, and a full dirndl skirt. Her only attendant was Miss Ruth Fiskum, who was gowned in pink silk jersey, a duplicate of the bride's frock, with a large white hat and corsage of gardenias. J. Allen Rhodes, of Hendersonville, N. C., was best man.

A reception in the Tower Room of Alban Towers followed the ceremony. Spring flowers, with shades of pink and white predominating, decorated the room.

Your Figure Madame!

By Ida Jean Kain.

Woman Reduces 55 Pounds in Six Months—Feels Fine!

TAKE IT OR leave it, but there's a lot to this diet and exercise combination. Sometimes I think I don't promise you enough, and that may keep you from getting started on your figure program. So here is the story of a woman who reduced five sizes in six months.

"Last November I finally determined to get down to business and make myself over. I wish you could have seen me. I weighed 200 pounds for my height of 5 feet 3 inches, and I wore a size 46 dress. Today I weigh 145 pounds and take a size 20 dress. My figure is nicely proportioned: bust, 38 inches; waist, 31 inches; hips, 38 inches. I am not flabby and my neck and throat haven't a wrinkle in them. I look at least 10 years younger. I went to my doctor for a thorough checkup and he tells me that I am in perfect condition and that I have added five years to my life.

She Feels Full of Pep

"It is such fun meeting friends who haven't seen me for a long time! They are just flabbergasted! And is my husband pround of me! And believe it or not, it has been lots of fun. Just to see that ugly fat leave, and to have that grand new feeling of pep and well being, to say nothing of the improvement made in my appearance . . . I could write pages!"

You have every chance of doing as well as this model reducer. She followed the "Twenty-One Day Diet," but if you will follow them consistently, you can lose just as rapidly on the "Summer Slimming Menus," which are balanced at 1,100 calories a day to include all the protective elements which keep you feeling and looking your best.

A Woman's New York

By Alice Hughes

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Wilhela Cushman, Ethel Little and other fashion editors I know, all of whom have prematurely white hair, have taken to leaving off their hats and instead are tinting their white locks in definite shades (of blue, purple, green and rose. Wilhela, who is tall and striking looking, wears a royal blue ribbon about her hair, and her curls are nearly the same shade. These girls look younger and more distinguished than us mere blondes and brunettes . . .

Visiting the Rainbow Room a few nights ago I saw the handsome newlyweds, Bernice Smith LeBaron and her husband, Eddie, maestro of the popular restaurant's rhumba band, and looking traditionally happy . . .

I HAVE discovered a good way to solve the summer diet problem, since I often grow weary of salads and cold cuts. Now, in the hot weather I practically live out of one of these new electric mixers. By just tossing in fruits or vegetables and turning on the motor, I get delicious juice mixtures, and its invention proves again the wonders of science when applied to the home.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Divorced Father Thinks Holiday Messages-by-Proxy, Lush With Love, Are His Due From Infant Son

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Two and a half years ago my daughter, aged 24, married a man from another city, with whom she had, mainly, a correspondence acquaintanceship. He had made several trips to see her and she had spent one short vacation with his family. I tried to get her to postpone the wedding until she knew him better but she was unwilling to do this. However, he did seem to be all that one could desire, as he stood high in civic, fraternal and business circles in his home city, and seemed to have a very pleasing personality.

Almost immediately after marriage, he displayed an insane temper over mere trifles, such as failure to mail a check the exact day a bill came due, or the arrangement of furniture in the apartment. When these tempers were on, he did not hesitate to strike her. After six months of almost constant abuse, she left him. Six months later, a son was born to her and when he was six months old she secured a divorce and was granted full custody of the child.

She returned home to live and has since devoted herself to the care of the baby. She writes him regularly concerning the health and progress of the baby, whom he sees whenever he comes to town. Now, this is the trouble: He says he is heartbroken because my daughter does not write him letters, and send him gifts, telegrams, etc., signed with the baby's name, on such occasions as Valentine's Day, Easter, Father's Day, etc.

She has told him repeatedly that when the baby is old enough to appreciate the significance of these days, she will teach him to observe them. But this does not satisfy the father. He wants it done now. To her (and to me) this is rank sentimentality, not true sentiment. Someone in his home town sent him a telegram at Easter, signed with the baby's name. He mailed this communication to my daughter with the notation: "You see, somebody thinks of me." All this seems utterly silly to me, but maybe I am too close to the situation to be impartial. I would like your opinion. Sincerely. F. B. C.

Maudlin Expectation

DEAR F. B. C.: This father's notion of the brand of attention he should receive, by proxy, from his infant son on special days is a lot of simpering rot; as nauseatingly absurd as anything of the kind I have ever heard about. Far from obliging him in any such preposterous undertaking, the child's mother should properly scorn the maudlin request. Certainly she owes him no apologetic explanation for refusing to author a mess of meaningless drivel.

Supposing she should supply him with material of the kind desired, and he should keep it on record until the child had reached an age when he completely comprehended the significance of the days thus observed; and supposing the child should thereafter stumble upon that record, I fancy he would burn with shame for ever having been made an unwitting party to such blithering idiocy. He would, indeed, if he had been brought up to be a manly little fellow, who knew instinctively the difference between sickening sentimentality and honest-to-god sentiment.

He could scarcely respect—but only pity, in a wry-mouthed sort of way—the father who would prize, or solicit, such trashy purported evidence of his paternal status. And I am sure he would question the taste and judgment of his mother for having identified him, even inferentially, with such silly and insincere business.

Running true to type, this undisciplined, infantile man is eager, merely, for flashy documentation of his parenthood. He would use his son's existence to adorn his ego. He would flourish telegrams, notes and cards of sentiment (signed in the child's name) about for the purpose of graphically illustrating his floridly complacent anecdotes concerning his alleged importance to the little fellow.

It seems to me that the mother has conducted herself with irreproachable fairness; indeed, with extraordinary generosity, in keeping this type of father regularly informed "concerning the health and progress of the baby," and in permitting him to call upon the child when he comes to town. After all, in view of his brutish behavior in the early stages of the child's prenatal existence, which compelled the mother to seek refuge with her parents in order to have the child in peace and rear him decently—in view of this, it seems to me he pretty well forfeited any justifiable claims to parental conceit; and certainly of the intimately knowledgeable, chest-smiting kind he is now seeking to establish and support.

In my opinion, he should be warmly, penitently grateful for the consideration that has been voluntarily accorded him by the child's mother. He hasn't a leg to stand on, in the matter of trying—as he is trying—to cheaply chisel his way further into the center foreground of the family picture as it exists today. He is not entitled to the phoney documentation of paternal self-importance that he craves. If he hopes some day to play a real father's role in his son's life and affections, he should be willing to work for his son's allegiance, by turning in a consistenly admirable fatherly performance henceforth. His current slobbering sentimentality is a heavy black mark against him, in anybody's eyes. M. H.

Sweetbreads With Ham Is Today's Recipe

Miss Alva Tyler, Home Economist, Suggests This Dish

By Martha Ellyn,
The Post Food Editor.

Favorite recipes of leading home economists of Washington will be featured daily in the Homemaker.

PLANNING MENUS and buying the vast quantities of food to be used in preparation of meals for guests of the tea and fountain rooms and the employes' cafeteria of a large store such as Woodward & Lothrop's is no small undertaking. Miss Alva Tyler, as production manager, does all this. A native of Boston, and educated in home economics at Simmons College there, Miss Tyler came to her present position seven years ago.

MISS TYLER

Miss Tyler gives the Post food readers a recipe today for a delicious combination of sweetbreads and ham.

Glazed Sweetbreads on Smithfield Ham

"Allow ½ pair of sweetbreads per serving. Wash the sweetbreads, put in a pan of cold water to which has been added 1 small onion and 1 bayleaf to each pair of sweetbreads. Cook two-thirds done. Pour off boiling water and blanch in cold water. Remove tubes and veins. Slice lengthwise in three parts. Place into a shallow baking dish.

"Prepare a sauce by using 1 carrot, 2 small stalks of celery and 2 small onions. Put these through the meat chopper. Then saute in ½ cup butter, to which blend in 2 teaspoons flour. Add 1 cup chicken stock, salt and pepper. Strain over the sweetbreads and broil until brown and glazed. Serve the sweetbreads on a thin slice of Smithfield ham."

(Saturday—Mrs. Fannie Walker Yeatman will give her favorite recipe.)

Stunt Party

"Now will everybody please be still a minute? Sh! Sh! Please! Please! Now listen everybody! We're going to have some entertainment . . . Yes! Everybody's going to have to do a stunt!

"Wait, wait, Mr. Hare! Don't you try to run out on us . . . Oh you can, too! You're terribly clever! Now, now, Miss Shrink, I see you trying to hide over there in that corner! It's no use. I have a nice little stunt all fixed up for you . . . And you, too, Mr. Oxley.

"Now first we must have some music. Don't you all think it would be nice if Mrs. Hawksy gave us a solo? All right, come on, Mrs. Hawksy . . . What? . . . Oh, it doesn't matter if you can't sing a note. No, it'll be all the funnier . . . Oh yes, yes, you have to! Now everybody be quiet while Mrs. Hawksy sings 'My Heart Belongs to Daddy.'

"Thank you, Mrs. Hawksy. I hope everybody'll be just as good a sport about getting up and acting silly as Mrs. Hawksy . . . Wait there, Mr. Hare! I see you! And Mr. Jitters, too! Don't you try to run away!

"Now, Mr. Oxley you're next . . . Oh, yes, you can, too! Folks, we're going to have Mr. Oxley do some animal imitations. What shall we have him be? . . . A kangaroo? . . . Oh, that will be a scream! Come on now, Mr. Oxley, and be a kangaroo . . . Oh, you can, too! . . . Oh, we'll tell you just what to do. Yes, you just come up here and get down on all fours . . . Oh, yes, you must!

"Thank you, Mr. Oxley. I just bet you could get a job in a zoo any day . . . A whisk broom? . . . I'll get you one in just a minute . . . Wait there, Mr. Jitters! Are you trying to slip out again? Well, just for that I'm going to have you give a chalk talk . . . Yes, you can, too! Well, it doesn't matter if you can't draw a line, it'll be all the funnier. Now I'll just set up this little blackboard . . . Now we're ready—wait, where's he gone? Mr. Jitters! Mr. Jitters! . . . Oh, well, I'll get hold of him later.

"Now then, you see this grass skirt? . . . We're going to have a Hula dance. And guess who's going to give it? Mrs. Portleigh! . . . Oh, yes, indeed you are, Mrs. Portleigh . . . Oh, well, it doesn't matter if you can't dance a step, it'll be all the funnier . . . Now you can just slip this on over your dress . . . Oh, yes you have to! . . . Too tight? Oh, it'll be all the funnier if it doesn't meet in the back. Now here's your gourds.

"Thank you, Mrs. Portleigh . . . Mr. Hare! Mr. Hare! Come back! We want you to make a speech! . . . Yes, you have to! Folks, Mr. Hare is perfectly brilliant but he's so shy nobody knows it . . . Yes, he can say the cleverest things. Why he can say things that'll just make you die laughing . . . Yes, come on now, Mr. Hare, and give us a funny talk—Wait! No, come back, please! . . . Oh well, I'll get hold of him later.

"Now where's Mr. Hamzurfel? Oh, yes! . . . Now Mr. Hamzurfel, you take this piece of paper and write a love sonnet to Miss Gimlet. We're going to give you just four minutes . . . Oh, yes, yes, you have to.

"And now while we're waiting—where's Mr. Hack? . . . I see you, Mr. Hack! No use to hide! Now folks, we're going to have Mr. Hack do an imitation of Casanova . . . Now, wait till I get you a sash, Mr. Hack . . . and a guitar. Now then, Mr. Hack—Say, WHERE did he go? . . . Mr. Hack! . . . Oh, well, I'll get hold of him later.

"Now the next number will be by Miss Shrink. Folks, Miss Shrink is a positive genius . . . Oh, yes, you are, Miss Shrink! Don't be so modest. Now then, we're going to have Miss Shrink and Mr. Muffin give the balcony scene from "Romeo and Juliet" . . . work them the fastest . . . Yes! Won't that be fun!"

What, Miss Shrink? . . . A drink? Well, be sure you come right back . . . Are you ready with that love sonnet, Mr. Hamzurfel? . . . All right, we'll give you just two more minutes.

"Now then, I'm going to pass around these papers and pencils and everybody is going to write a 500-word explanation of the Einstein theory . . . Oh, yes, yes, everybody has to! And while you're writing, I'm going to round up Mr. Hare and Mr. Jitters, and Mr. Hack and Miss Shrink and bring them in here and MAKE them do their stunts.

"Now don't anybody leave, for in a little while we're going to have a mental test. Yes! And guess what we're going to do? We're going to take some of the knottiest problems in this old high school algebra and see who can

100-Year-Old Woman Dies in Fredericksburg

Mrs. Letitia Embrey Saw Kin March To Four Wars

Special Dispatch to The Post

Fredericksburg, Va., July 5.—Mrs. Letitia Embrey, who on January 2 last rounded out a full century of life, died at her home here yesterday morning. Funeral services will be held Thursday afternoon.

Mrs. Embrey had no formula for longevity except normal living. She once said, "I have lived a normal, Christian life, tried to do my duty, kept house and worked. I suppose the good Lord just spared me to this age."

Dimming eyesight was her principal handicap in her late years, but until a few months ago this did not prevent her from taking a lively interest in current affairs.

She was born in Stafford County, the daughterd of Mr. and Mrs. William Embrey, in 1839. Her husband, Wellford G. Embrey, died in 1881.

Mrs. Embrey saw men march away to four wars, the Mexican War, Civil War, Spanish War and World War.

She is survived by three children, Wistar H. Embrey, Miss Addie Embrey and Mrs. Charles Curtis, all of Fredericksburg.

John W. Sanford

Charlottesville, Va., July 5.—John Williams Sanford, 46, for over 25 years a bond salesman connected with E. H. Rollins & Sons, Inc., New York, but who for the past three years had resided here, died yesterday at University Hospital.

He married Miss Anne Harison, of Massachusetts, who survives, with three children, John W. Sanford, jr., and Misses Beverly Anne and Mary Winslow Sanford, all of this county.

Mrs. Arthur J. Barton

Wilmington, N. C., July 5.—Funeral services for Mrs. Arthur J. Barton, 71, wife of Dr. Barton, pastor of Temple Baptist Church here, will be held tomorrow afternoon. Mrs. Barton died Tuesday morning at her home.

Va. Potato Blight Again Rampant; Spraying Urged

Blacksburg, Va., July 5 (AP).—Late blight, the disease that caused heavy losses to Irish potato growers last year, has been reported again in eastern Virginia this season.

The disease may be expected to continue to spread as long as the temperature remains moderate to cool, and there is plenty of rain or heavy dews, horticucturists advise. Spraying or dusting of potatoes is recommended before the disease reaches epidemic proportions.

Spraying or dusting must be thorough enough to cover the foliage completely and must be repeated frequently if satisfactory control is to be obtained. Weekly application may be necessary.

Materials recommended by the Virginia Agriculture Experiment Station (effective for both late blight and flea beetle) are calcium arsenate-bordeaux mixture 2-4-6-50 for spraying; that is, 2 pounds of calcium arsenate, 4 pounds of copper sulphate, and 6 pounds of hydrated lime in 50 gallons of water.

'Tony' Baumann, Miniature Camera Expert, Killed in 45-Foot Fall, to Be Buried in Kentucky

Was Well Known in Washington; Lectured Here 3 Weeks Ago

Funeral arrangements for Anton F. Baumann, 38, known as "Tony" to camera fans in Washington and throughout the United States and Canada for his work with miniature cameras and color photography, were being made yesterday in Lexington, Ky., by his bride of eight months and officials of the E. Leitz Co.

Mr. Baumann was killed Tuesday when he fell from a 45-foot water tower in Lexington while making color photographs for Life Magazine. Associated with the E. Leitz Co. since he was 14 years old, he had shared in the development of practically every important improvement to miniature cameras since their beginning.

A frequent visitor to Washington, Mr. Baumann lectured here three weeks ago on the National Parks, of which his pictures are famous throughout the photographic world.

A native of Germany, he came to this country three years ago, and had taken out his first citizenship papers. His home was in Long Island, N. Y., but he had planned to settle in Washington at the end of his present tour.

Mr. Baumann's early experience as an optical engineer in the Leitz company factory enabled him to design many accessories used with the miniature camera. For the last 12 years he had toured Europe and America making protographs and lecturing.

Besides his wife, Mrs. Irma Baumann, he leaves relatives in Germany.

Police Find Beaten Man in Graveyard, Then They Don't

For about two hours early yesterday in the eerie darkness of a country graveyard, two Prince Georges County policemen and several members of the Bladensburg rescue squad were fairly close to believing in such things as hobgoblins.

Policemen Charles McGuire and Edwin Cissel were summoned to the Methodist Church graveyard at Oxon Hill. There, they found Benjamin Snead, of Washington, lying among the tombstones, apparently unconscious from a severe beating.

The officers went to a nearby store and called the Bladensburg rescue squad. Returning to the graveyard a few minutes later, they found Snead gone. A diligent search failed to disclose his whereabouts. Later it was learned that in the interim several neighbors found the injured man and took him to Casualty Hospital, where he was treated and released. Police then began a search for his assailant.

$2,431,500 in Va. Projects Wait General Fund Report

Release of Conditional Grants to Score Of State Agencies Hinges on Hodges' Statement, Expected This Month

By the Associated Press

Richmond, Va., July 5.—Hopes of a score of State institutions and agencies for release of $2,431,500 in conditional appropriations hinged today on what Comptroller Leroy Hodges will have to tell the Governor the latter port of this month as to the condition of the general fund at the close of the fiscal year.

The comptroller's report, however, may not be the deciding factor, as expenditure of the conditional funds was made contingent by the Legislature on the Governor's certification to the comptroller that in his judgment their release would not create or add to a general fund deficit during the biennium which ends June 30, 1940.

Thus far, Gov. Price has released none of the conditional appropriations, although he has authorized four institutions to borrow funds, because of "emergency" needs, in anticipation of appropriations. These were Virginia Military Institute, authorized to borrow up to $150,000 for its new library building; Radford State Teachers College, $75,000 for a science hall; Farmville State Teachers College, $71,500 for a library building, and the State College for Negroes at Petersburg, $15,000 for additional structures. Forty-five per cent PWA grants were among factors taken into consideration in releasing the V. M. I., Radford and Farmville funds.

The other project under way involving State funds is the new Medical College of Virginia hospital building, for which the Legislature tentatively earmarked $250,000, to become available this fiscal year under the same conditions. Dr. W. T. Sanger, president of the college, said it was counting on ultimately obtaining the amount.

At the beginning of the biennium, the general fund showed a surplus of $5,971,320, but Col. Hodges recently pointed out in a report to the Governor that general fund appropriations for the first year of the biennium totaled $4,628,952 in excess of revenue estimates. In January, however, the State had drawn on the supply only to the extent of $655,985.

Fiscal officers declined today to hazard a guess on what the comptroller's annual report would show. The statement showing the condition of the general fund as of June 30 probably will not be ready until July 20 or later.

The conditional appropriations include the following:

College of William and Mary, additional equipment, $7,000; college division of the Medical College of Virginia, remodeling McGuire Hall, $40,000, and additional equipment, $10,000; hospital division, Medical College, additional equipment, $5,000.

University of Virginia, additional equipment, $75,000; V. P. I., additional equipment, $20,000; sewers and drainage, $10,000, and greenhouses, $26,000; V. M. I., additional equipment, $10,000; Virginia State College for Negroes, additional equipment, $25,000.

Mary Washington College, additional equipment, $5,000; Madison College, additional equipment, $12,500; State Teachers College, Radford, additional equipment, $7,000.

Acquisition of land for George Washington Memorial Parkway, $50,000; addition to Blow gymnasium at William and Mary, $50,000; addition to hospital at University of Virginia, $250,000; library building at V. M. I., $150,000; library at Farmville Teachers College, $120,000; classroom and administration buildings at Fredericksburg Teachers (Mary Washington) College, $150,000.

New hospital at Medical College of Virginia, $250,000; remodeling and repairing agricultural hall at V. P. I., $50,000; additions and betterments at Blue Ridge Sanatorium, $42,500; at Catawba Sanatorium, $40,000, and at Piedmont Sanatorium, $30,000.

The $150,000 and $88,000 for the State police radio and communications systems and a $40,000 fund for purchase of the Monroe Birthplace were conditionally appropriated in special acts.

State Tightens Regulation of School Buses

New Standards Limit Load, Require Steel Structure

By the Associated Press

Richmond, Va., July 5.—The State department of education announced today a set of standards and regulations governing buses used in the transportation of school children, including a requirement that all new equipment be of steel construction.

The regulations were drawn by a committee headed by Raymond V. Long, director of school buildings for the department of education. Five division superintendents of schools served with him.

Dr. Sidney B. Hall, State superintendent of public instruction, in letters to the local superintendent enclosing copies of the regulations, pointed out that the standards are applicable especially to new equipment, but were recommended also "as standards and guides to follow in improving the pupil transportation facilities you now use. As fas as practicable existing equipment should be improved to conform with these standards."

The regulations provided that the gross weight of school buses when fully loaded shall not exceed the maximum carrying capacity of the vehicles as established by the manufacturers. set out specific load capacities per tire which automatically fixes the carrying capacity, outline basic pupil loads according to body lengths of the vehicle, provide for emergency doors opening outward, and many other safety features that a recent survey of buses by the State division of motor vehicles indicated were not always used.

Another recommendation called for legislative action to require all motor vehicles to stop on approaching a school bus that is loading or unloading. The present law requires vehicles to slow down to five miles per hour.

The rules were made effective July 1.

A recent survey of Virginia school buses showed 39 per cent classed as "unsafe" at the time of inspection.

The Washington Post Bureau, 907 Prince St., Alexandria, Va. Phone Temple 3767 Delivery Service, Phone Alex. 347.

Dr. William Lewis Schafer, Alexandria City health officer, has been notified of the award of a scholarship by Harvard University School of Public Health. The scholarship entitles Dr. Schafer to a full academic year of study with tuition and all other charges paid and compensation at the rate of $200 per month. The Harvard school is the third oldest in the country and the most outstanding for training public health specialists.

The board of health of Alexandria approximately six months ago recommended to the city council a reorganization of the health department, with a full-time health officer. It was stipulated that the health officer's education must comply with standards recommended by the State department of health. These call for two years of service in a standard health department or one year of postgraduate college training.

The Harvard scholarship will enable him to meet the State stipulations, and during his absence a qualified public health officer will be supplied. This officer will be from the State department of health, but will be considered a city employe.

School Finances Revealed

Superintendent of Schools T. C. Williams yesterday issued the financial statement of the public schools of the city, showing disbursements of $300,118.46, and a balance on hand of $100,490.21. The statement covers the school years, from July 1, 1938 to June 30, 1939. The city's budget is adopted by the calendar year, therefore school funds showing as a balence now are really the amount left to finance the school opening in September and operation until January 1, 1940.

The receipts the past year were: State, $67,170.26; city, $232,839.63; other funds, $6,217.18.

The report shows the enrollment the past session was 5,443 pupils, with an average daily attendance of 4,291. There were 1,629 pupils in the high school.

The school system has 179 teachers, including supervising principals.

Fairfax Fire Volunteers Denied Fund

Town Board Rejects O-W-L Plea to Share In Distribution of Protection Money

FAIRFAX BUREAU OF THE POST, P. O. BOX 245, Fairfax, Va. Phone Falls Church 1088 M

The Fairfax County board of supervisors yesterday turned down the request of the O-W-L Volunteer Fire Department for participation in the distribution of county fire protection funds.

A large delegation from the Occoquan, Woodbridge and Lorton communities appeared before the board with the request that the county contribute to the upkeep of the department since it serves a large area in the southern section of the county now without fire protection. It was asserted the O-W-L department is actually located and incorporated in the town of Occoquan, Prince William County.

Commonwealth's Attorney Paul E. Brown informed the supervisors that the fire protection law under which the county is now operating prohibits the funds raised by the county fire levy from being distributed to companies outside the county. He pointed to similar conditions in the area surrounding the City of Alexandria and the Town of Falls Church, where fire companies located at those places respond to alarms in the county.

The board was informed that under another section of the State law they were granted authority to establish fire zones and use the money raised in that zone or area to pay for fire protection, whether the company is located in the county or outside. This method could be used in place of the present county-wide levy and fire protection system, proponents said.

The delegation from Occoquan was told to take the question up with the county firemen's association since the board cannot act on a change until the county budget is prepared for the next fiscal year, which will be in February.

Supervisors G. Wallace Carper, of Providence District; C. H. Powell, of Falls Church District, and J. T. Blincoe, of Lee District, left yesterday afternoon to attend the sessions of the Virginia League of Counties, which opens today in Blacksburg, Va. They will represent Fairfax County.

Vale—The local home demonstration club has elected Mrs. Edward S. Smith, delegate; Mrs. Gene Crosen, representative, and Miss Leona Hunt, alternate, to the annual meeting of the Virginia Federation of Home Demonstration Clubs in Blacksburg the latter part of this month.

The club will also sponsor an entertainment in the Vale Community House on July 12, to be given by the members of the Fairview Home Demonstration Club, with the two clubs dividing the proceeds.

Americans Far Behind in British Open Golf

Johnny Bulla Scores 77; Little Has 79

3 Britons, Locke, Of South Africa, Pace 129 Entries With Cards of 70

By Drew Middleton,
Associated Press Sports Writer.

St. Andrews, Scotland, July 5.—The British Empire dominated the British Open golf championship today as Bobby Locke, of South Africa, and three Englishmen, J. H. Busson, Dick Burton and Max Faulkner, set the pace for 129 entries with 70s for the first round of play.

Far down the list, at 77 and 79, respectively, were the United States hopes, Johnny Bulla, of Chicago, and Lawson Little, the former amateur king. Checked by their own ineptness on the greens as well as a day of wind, rain and sleet, they must turn in sensational golf tomorrow to win a place in Friday's 36-hole final.

Despite the elements, the top four each clipped three strokes from par today, and 11 others bettered 73. So low was the scoring that Henry Cotton, the favorite, had 25 players ahead of him, and he had a 74.

Sensational Round

A stroke behind the leading foursome came Reg Whitcombe, the defending titlist; Alf Perry, who won in 1935; Martine Pose, the Argentine stylist; W. H. Davies, Jimmy Fallon and the diminutive and plucky Welshman, Dave Rees.

Whitcombe provided the day's most sensational string when he went six holes in threes.

Jim Bruen, who ran the qualifying rounds for his own benefit, was bracketed with another amateur, Len Crawley, and two others at 72. Bruen and Crawley were the lowest amateur scorers.

At the close of tomorrow night's play the low 44 will be picked for Friday's rounds. Little and Bulla therefore face a terrific task in this weather and on a course distinctly unsuited to their games.

Little Takes Seven

The "villain" of today's play was the long fourteenth, where Gene Sarazen lost the title in 1933. Little, hitting spasmodically, but still within sight of a reasonable score, took a seven there. He had a six at the thirteenth and that fourteenth about ruled him out.

The debacle started with a drive into "beardies" bunker. He just got out, played his third to the left, was short with his fourth, made the green in five with a short iron and two putted. That was the ball game.

But the fourteenth wasn't done ye'

Locke came storming by later. He was six under fours coming up [illegible] caddies call "that old devil," and an immense gallery of close to 5,000—one of several such during the day—was sure he was destiny's own darling boy.

He took an eight.

Tribute to Locke

It was a tribute to Locke's golfing temperament that this tremendous whack didn't down him. He got his game under control and came in level fours for the last four holes. This exhibition of golfing nerves—or lack of them—led many to believe that he, not Bruen or Cotton, is the man to beat.

Bulla was just downright mediocre. He's not used to his new putter, the weather or this tortuous old course. His 77 was better than Little's, but Lawson seems to have one big bid left. Johnny is so hagridden by fears of overputting, underputting or overclubbing that he's tight as a drumhead.

No one was losing sight of Bruen in this most wide open of open tourneys. He played two holes without his usual command on the in-nine, but that's no indication he's slipping. Two other amateurs, Alex Kyle, the titlist, and Robert Sweeney, the former Californian who held the amateur crown in 1937, are coupled with Cotton at 74 and are swinging better than they have been in the last week.

In fact, many old-timers pointed to the high standing of the amateurs in today's play. They thought the glorious days of Bobby Jones were back, with one heartening difference for the British. The new Jones—Bruen—is British, or, anyway, just across the way, from Cork.

Former Nationals President Looks Back on the 'Days When'

New York, July 5.—The Nats played errorless ball today; they belted two home runs into the right field seats; they profited from two Yankee errors and received seven bases on balls. But they lost the ball game, as Washington teams will.

They were beaten, 6 to 4, by the Yankees before a crowd that was only 55,000 shy of the 1939 record attendance of 61,000 set here yesterday. They were the mediums of young Atley Donald's tenth pitching triumph of the season. Late of Newark, Rookie Donald has yet to be beaten this season but the Nats might have beaten him today.

They might have beaten him if they hadn't stirred up a pair of gift runs for the Yankees in the fifth inning when the Yanks broke a 1-1 tie and took a 3-1 lead against Ken Chase. But Chase wasn't strictly responsible for those two runs. Some weird defensive play behind him, which failed to register in the error column, cost Chase the runs.

Easy Fly Is Triple

In that fifth inning, after Gordon had opened with a two-base hit to leftfield, Chase struck out Keller and forced Dahlgren to ground to Lewis, but with Pitcher Donald at bat the Nats' outfield played him as if he were in the throes of anemia. Leftfielder Johnny Welaj and Centerfielder Sammy West were nearly within handshaking distance of the Nats' infielders, and Donald's tame fly ball went over their heads for a three-base hit that scored a run.

And then with Crosetti at bat, Rick Ferrell failed to stop a pitch over the heart of the plate and when the ball rolled against the backstop, Donald scored from third. It was scored as a passed ball.

Disaster continued to dog the heels of the Nats even after New York had scored the tie-breaking runs in the fifth. The prospects of commencing their series with the Philadelphia Athletics minus the services of Buddy Lewis, leading hitter of the club, faced the team when the young third-sacker collided with the field boxes while chasing Red Rolfe's pop foul. Bruises above both knees were the result, but Lewis was not expected to be out of the line-up more than two days, if at all.

The Nats matched the Yankees in hits, seven for seven, and in homers, two for two, but at the end of the sixth inning they were laboring under a 6-1 deficit. Buddy Lewis' single, and Joe Gordon's error and Cecil Travis' ground-rules double which hopped the low railing in left field drove in a run in the fourth inning and then the Yankees matched it with the help of their first hit off Chase. The latter walked Rolfe with one out, Selkirk's single moved Rolfe to third and he scored while DiMaggio was forcing Selkirk at second.

Two Joes Homer

In due course, the horrible fifth inning was enacted, and the Yanks had their 3-1 lead. They made it 6-1 in the sixth when Selkirk singled to right, DiMaggio pounded his eighth homer of the season into the right center seats and Gordon pumped his thirteenth into the left-field pavilion.

A run was achieved by the Nats in the seventh after Rick Ferrell and West walked with two out, and Prichard grounded to Gordon, who made a wild throw to first, Ferrell scoring and the other runners advancing to second and third. At this

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

New York, July 5.—At a time when big league baseball is supposed to be developing a death-rattle from an overdose of Yankee power, a grist of amazingly healthy symptoms are in evidence. There's life in the old game yet, and vigor, too.

POVICH

We are not referring, specifically, to the fact that 249,541 customers were attracted to the eight major league parks on July 4, although it is pretty weighty testimony that Yankee supremacy is not exactly starving out the other club owners. And evidence, too, that fans are still going to ball games even if the Yanks don't happen to be in town.

But what is even more encouraging is the outcropping of fire and spirit among the ball players themselves. With them there apparently is no disposition to curl up and play dead even though the Yankees are making a shambles of the American League race and promise to dispatch the National League pennant winner in short order again in the world series. On several fronts within the past few days, there were signs that the game is very much alive and, we should say, kicking.

At Chicago a couple of days ago, Managers Jimmy Dykes and Fred Haney kicked so vigorously, in fact, that they were both tossed out of the game by the umpires. The fact that both clubs are in second division with no place to go this season, doesn't seem to disturb such as Dykes and Haney, who enliven matters very nicely.

It's a Good Thing Zeke Was "Wild"

And at the Polo Grounds over the week-end, what did we have but a gorgeous fight between Zeke Bonura, of the Giants, and Manager Leo Durocher of the Dodgers.

The spectacle of big Bonura chasing little Durocher into right field after being stepped on as Durocher crossed first base certainly compensated New York and Brooklyn National League fans for their attendance.

Eye-witnesses tell it that Bonura, unable to catch Durocher for a time, suddenly discovered he was still carrying the ball in his fist and let it fly at Durocher's head. Which leads us to believe that it might have been more than an "accident" that Durocher stepped on one of Bonura's tootsies. Big Zeke is usually a tractable fellow, willing to overlook any mere indignities, but if he chases Durocher to the outfield to get a crack at him then Bonura, at least, believes he had cause.

This week has already produced one of the prize blasts of late seasons, the tirade against League President Ford Frick and Manager Bill Terry of the Giants, by Larry McPhail, red-headed general manager of the Brooklyn Club. McPhail pulled no punches. He accused Terry of attempting to intimidate umpires, he accused Frick of taking no action, and he publicly announced that he was taking his complaint over Frick's head to the board of directors of the league.

Of course, the fact that the Giants and Dodgers are to meet in a return series at Ebbets Field later in the week may have inspired McPhail's blast. It certainly won't hurt the game at Ebbets Field during that series, and it made lively reading. To assume that the nearness of the next Giant-Brooklyn series and the timing of McPhail's outburst is a coincidence would be almost assuming too much.

A. L. Needs More Dutch Leonards

The best commentary on the continuing interest in the American League's games despite the run-away race the Yankees are making of the pennant, is probably offered by the July 4 attendance at Detroit. The Tigers were playing the Indians for what? For fourth place, yet the park was filled to capacity with 56,272 fans. Apparently folks still must have their baseball without too much concern about whether their clubs are going to win the pennant.

At Yankee Stadium yesterday there was a different sort of outpouring. We mean the 61,808 who saw the Yankees play the Nats. They came chiefly for "Lou Gehrig Day," and the thing got out of hand. They have bargained for the sort of show they got. It was supposed to be merely another testimonial to a ball player, although this ball player was closing out a remarkable career. What it actually was, as Lou Gehrig stood out there at the plate, tears streaming down his face, was a mass sob scene.

It was an epic moment as far as sports history is concerned—a moment to be rated with the moment of Dempsey's flight from the ring against Luis Firpo and with the bloody end of his bout with Willard at Toledo. And to be rated, too, with the time Babe Ruth called his shot at Chicago and the long count of Gene Tunney in the same city. In any recapitulation of the supreme moments in sports, Lou Gehrig Day must find a place.

And as far as the Yankees are concerned, there may be an alternative to breaking up that great team to insure a better-balanced American League. What the league needs is about six more Dutch Leonards. Scatter a few more Leonards around the circuit and there would be no need to break up the Yanks. His knuckle ball would be the great leveller.

Nova, Galento Fight in Fall In Philadelphia

Sept. 7 Bout Moves From Yankee Stadium; Lou Gets Big Cut

By the United Press.

New York, July 5.—The Tony Galento-Lou Nova heavyweight contenders battle was shifted today from New York's Yankee Stadium to Philadelphia's Municipal Stadium on September 7.

The last obstacle to this brawl was bowled over when Nova and his manager, Ray Carlen, demanded and got a certain large guarantee—with the option of a percentage of the gate.

This large percentage for Nova was necessary because both Lou and Carlen had been set to fight Joe Louis for the heavyweight title in the fall.

Lou Forced

But when Manager Carlen realized that Nova had been given the run-around and was virtually forced to fight Galento, he demanded and received guarantees that the Nova-Galento winner would fight for the world heavyweight championship next June.

At first Promoter Mike Jacobs had expected to hold the Nova-Galento bout in New York some time in August, but the powers that be in Philadelphia changed that decision, and an avalanche of Pennsylvania sentiment swayed Jacobs to make the transfer.

This sentiment crystallized into a guarantee of at least $125,000 for Promoter Jacobs, if the shift were made, and into a sizable guarantee for Lou Nova and Manager Carlen.

Huddles Brought Shift

This shift from Yankee Stadium to Philadelphia's stadium, was brought about by an intensive campaign climaxed today by several huddles among Jacobs, Leo Rains, chairman of the Pennsylvania Athletic Commission; Muggsy Taylor, Philadelphia promoter, and one of the wealthiest and most influential men in Pennsylvania.

At these conferences it was pointed out that George Godfrey and Primo Carnera grossed $180,000 in Philadelphia, and that Joe Louis and Al Ettore grossed $225,000; also, that the first Dempsey-Tunney fight grossed more than $1,600,000—more than any New York fight ever drew.

Nats' President in '89 Tells How He 'Stole' Catcher Connie Mack

By Al Hailey

Baseball today can't hold a candle to what it was in the old days—take it from the man who "stole" Connie Mack for the Washington Nationals 53 years ago.

It was this "steal," however, which started baseball's "grand old man" on the road to fame, and the man who perpetrated the act is Walter F. Hewett, oldest living former president of the Nationals.

Hewett, who lives at the John Dickson Home, 5000 Fourteenth street northwest, signed Mack on a Sunday afternoon in September of 1886 in Hartford, Conn. He obtained the now-famous and beloved manager of the Philadelphia Athletics along with three other players for the exorbitant sum of $3,000.

Blasts Today's Game

"Yes, we had to really go out and steal ball players in those days—it was a question of first come, first served," Hewett mused, then added morosely, "but I wouldn't give you a dime for the way they play the game today."

Hewett, who served as president of the old-time Nationals in 1888-89 and who hired and lost numerous "greats" of baseball history, yesterday confessed he is sour on today's version of baseball. He would rather talk about those teams of the 80s.

"Connie was one of the finest characters I ever knew," he said. "I'll never forget the day I signed him. I liked him the minute I saw him—he was that kind of a youngster."

The Floradora girls were hardly out of pigtails when he was commissioned by his father, H. C. Hewett, then president of the Nationals, to go to Hartford and obtain mack's release.

Three Clubs Wanted Connie

"Charley Sobey had written my father that the Detroits, the Bostons and the New Yorks were after one of his boys—a fellow named Connie Mack—and that if we wanted him we had better let him know, Hewett said.

"Charley was one of my father's close friends and managed the Hartford club. When I got to Hartford to steal Mack from under the noses of the other teams, Charley introduced him as Connie Mack.

"But when I looked at the contracts I thought someone was kidding me. I saw I was getting a Cornelius McGillicudy, so I went right over and said, 'Hey, Charley, what is this all about?'

"'Oh, that's just what he calls himself,' Charley told us."

Catchers weren't "great" ball players in those days, and Mack was no exception, Hewett explained. Result was that on the trade he obtained three other players, Gilmore, a pitcher; Craig, first baseman, and Shock, a rightfielder.

Fooled the Umpires

"Connie was 24 then and just getting his start, but he knew all the tricks. He used to make a noise which made the umpire think the batter had hit a foul tip, then catch ball and force the umpire to call the batter out," he laughed. "I think he was called down a couple of times for this."

For his first year with the Nationals, which was then affiliated

Nats and A's To Play Under Lights Tonight

Joe Haynes to Hurl First Night Game For Griffith Forces

New York, July 5.—Their first fling at night life in the big leagues will be taken by the Nats tomorrow when they meet the Philadelphia Athletics under the lights of Shibe Park starting at 9 p. m.

For their debut in night ball, Manager Bucky Harris has nominated Joe Haynes as the Nats' pitcher. Haynes has had experience in night pitching in the Piedmont League, where half of his 22 victories last season were achieved at night.

Aside from Haynes, First Baseman Bob Prichard will be the only Washington player who will not be new to the lights, unless Harris inserts Jimmy Bloodworth at second base and Jake Early as his catcher.

Still complaining of a twisted left knee, George Case is eager to return to the Nats' line-up. He has been out of the game for a week and unless he is able to rejoin the Washington line-up before the All-Star game, he will not be permitted to play on July 11, according to Manager Harris.

Somewhat irked by Case's absence, Harris declared:

"If he's not fit to play for us, I won't let him play in the All-Star game."

In the event that Case is withdrawn from the American League line-up, to which he was selected by popular vote of the league managers, another Washington player would be named to replace him.

Harris' vote will go to Dutch Leonard, the only pitcher to beat the Yankees three straight times in several seasons.—Povich.

Connie Improving But Still in Bed

Philadelphia, July 5 (AP).—Connie Mack, president and manager of the Philadelphia Athletics, was reported much improved today by members of his family.

They said he had the best night since he was stricken with a recurrence of an old gall bladder ailment in Boston last week. The 76-year-old leader of the A's is being kept in bed to conserve his strength.

Smith Allows Indians 2 Hits; Chisox Win

Eric McNair's 7th Inning Homer Gives Chicago 2-1 Victory

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, July 5.—Towheaded Eddie Smith, who for three years has been trying to southpaw his way to victory over the Cleveland Indians, did it today in his tenth attempt—a two-hit performance which gave Chicago's White Sox a 2 to 1 triumph in the series opener.

Eric McNair's seventh-inning homer off Harry Eisenstat broke a 1 to 1 tie and gave Smith the decision. Before being sold to the Sox this spring, Smith had lost eight straight to Cleveland as a Philadelphia Athletic pitcher. He dropped another in May hurling for the Sox.

Both Indian hits were singles and it was a double steal executed by Rollie Hemsley and Bruce Campbell that gave Cleveland its score in the sixth. With one out Hemsley singled and Campbell walked. Hemsley advanced as Ben Chapman flied to Rip Radcliff and scored on the double steal play with Campbell.

It was Chicago's fourth straight victory.

D. C. Man Lands Black Drum Fish Weighing 51½ Lbs.

Theodore Entwisle, of 2800 Branch avenue southeast, came back from a Fourth of July week-end fishing trip with a fish story that was true, and he could prove it. In the presence of five witnesses he caught a 51½-pound black drum at the mouth of the Choptank River on Monday, and yesterday it was on exhibit in the Neptune Room ice-box.

Entwisle entered it in competition for the cup offered by the restaurant for the biggest fish caught during the year. Others on the fishing trip were Mrs. Entwisle, Miss Margaret Pahlman, Dr. Clarence Wittler, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Campbell and Clarence Cox, captain of the boat, and Miss Oxford.

Estalella Fined $25, Benched For Not Running Out Grounder

Bucky Harris Says He Has Warned Bobby but He Didn't Obey Commands

Special Dispatch to The Post.

New York, July 5.—Bobby Estalella, Cuban outfielder of the Nats, was fined $25 by Manager Bucky Harris, and benched in addition, today.

Harris stated he had fined Estalella for failing to run out a ground ball in the second game of the Fourth of July twin bill at the Yankee Stadium. Estalella's failure to move away from the plate, resulted in a double play.

"I had warned Estalella before, that he must run on any sort of a hit," said Harris.

For the first time in nearly a month, Estalella did not start in leftfield for the Nats today but later got into the game when he appeared as a pinch hitter, swatting a long fly that DiMaggio hauled down after a lengthy run.

Wilson, Worsham Beaten in Tennis

Haverford, Pa., July 5 (AP).—Paul Wilson and Herb Worsham, second-seeded doubles team in the national interscholastic tennis tournament, were eliminated from further participation today as play moved into the semifinal round at Merion Cricket Club. Bob Lovelace and Bernhard Weil, of Corpus Christi, Tex., defeated the favored Ventura (Calif.) duo in straight sets, 7—5, 6—4.

In the only singles match of the day, Jack Kramer, defending champion from Montebello, Calif., caught up with the field and advanced to the quarterfinals, to be played tomorrow, with 1—6, 6—3, 6—0 victory over Al Everts, of Boston. A blister on his racquet hand bothered Kramer in the first set, but he settled down after that.

Charles H. Freer and Davis Kay, Washington (D. C.) entries in the doubles, were defeated in straight sets by Everts and Ernest Johnson, of Boston, 6—0, 6—3.

Nat Pitching Staff On the Dwindle Again—Kelley Lost

Special Dispatch to The Post

New York, July 5.—The Washington pitching staff, already undermanned, today was reduced to seven when Harry Kelley parted company with the team to take treatments at Hot Springs, Ark.

The veteran Kelley is suffering from a swelling in both knees. He was scheduled to pitch today's game, but at noon he boarded a plane for Hot Springs on the advice of the Nats' physician.

Joe Burke Loafs To Triumph In Scull Races

Henley-on-Thames, England, July 5 (AP).—Joe Burke, of Philadelphia's Penn Athletic Club, opened the defense of his diamond sculls crown today with a victory over N. D. Moffatt, of the Toronto Argonauts, at the Royal Henley Regatta. Burke was clocked in 10 minutes and 15 seconds.

Burke won by four lengths. For the last 200 yards he appeared to be loafing, while Moffatt put his back behind the oars all the way.

Polo Player Hurt As Mount Falls

Westbury, N. Y., July 5 (INS).—C. Mott Woolley, a former member of the championship Yale University polo team, was seriously hurt here late this afternoon on Waterbury Field when his mount fell and skidded 10 feet along the ground on top of him in the third period of a Meadowbrook Club Cup contest.

Woolley was playing at No. 1 for Broadhollow when his mount's foreleg tangled with Winston Guest's horse midway in the third period. Woolley was unconscious for 40 minutes and was removed to the North Country Community Hospital in Glencove, Long Island.

Woolley, who is 22 years old, just graduated from Yale University and lives in Greenwich, Conn.

Cooke, Riggs Win Way To Wimbledon Finals

Chicago Youngster Defeats Ferenc Puncec; Cooke Beats Henckel in Four Sets

By Scotty Reston,
Associated Press Sports Writer.

Wimbledon, England, July 5.—Bobby Riggs, of Chicago, and Elwood Cooke, of Portland, Oreg., a couple of grinning American boys who room together and even look something alike, turned Wimbledon's "world" championship into an exhibition of United States tennis today by beating Ferenc Puncec, of Yugoslavia, and Henner Henkel, of Germany, in the semifinals.

Riggs annexed Yugoslavia 6—2, 6—3, 6—4, and Cooke encircled Germany, 6—3, 4—6, 6—4, 6—4.

These two upstarts sat in the stands and watched each other win and when Riggs staggered off the court with his 12 racquets, he explained:

"Say we cooked up this all-American final last night as a birthday present for Cooke. He was 25 today and we figured we oughta celebrate."

Gain in Doubles

Late in the day, Riggs and Cooke just managed to squeeze into the semifinals of the men's doubles, where they meet that remarkable French pair, Jacques Brugnon and Jean Borotra. The Americans defeated England's George Patrick Hughes and H. Billington, 6—3, 3—6, 6—8, 6—2, 11—9.

United States Champion Alice Marble, of San Francisco, and Mrs. Sarah Palfrey Fabyan, of Cambridge, Mass., get a chance to complete the American slam tomorrow when they meet Mrs. Hilda Krahwinkel Sperling, of Denmark, and Kay Stammers, of England, respectively, in the semifinals of women's singles.

There's something sublimely impudent about this cocky young American team. When Don Budge turned pro last year, the wise birds over here gathered around and decided the American tennis monopoly was broken. Whereupon Riggs, Cooke, Don McNeill, Gene Smith and company proceeded to take over the finals of the French championship and then monopolize Wimbledon. Not since Sidney Wood and Frank Shields went to the last round in 1931 with Wood winning by default has there been an all-American men's final and not since Ellsworth Vines came through in 1932 has an American won on his debut at Wimbledon. Both Cooke and Riggs are making their first appearances at this famous tennis center.

Supreme Confidence

Riggs is easily the most nonchalant customer who ever graced the center court. He duck-waddled out today at 2:50 p. m., gave up his service in the first game and then proceeded to sweep the astonished Puncec right off the court.

When, with sheer superiority of speed and stroke, he had pulled out the first set, Bobby decided he'd take it easy. He didn't even try to return Puncec's service half the

Welsh Plays Mitchell in Men's D. C. Tennis Semifinals Today

Lynch Plays Johnsen in Other Tilt

Six-Time Defending Champion Hard Put To Defeat Shore In 2 Sets, 6–4, 6–0

By Jack Munhall.

Top-seeded Barney Welsh, six-time defending champion, and third-seeded Dooly Mitchell, his most persistent rival for championship honors, yesterday beat down stubborn opposition at Columbia to advance into the semifinal round of the Men's District Tennis Tournament.

Welsh, hard put to handle Frank Shore's low chops on the courts which were freshly wet by a 15-minute downpour, came from behind in the first set to win, 6—4, 6—0.

Mitchell again displayed the fortitude and headiness he is noted for by overpowering the younger and faster Buddy Adair to win perhaps the most thrilling match of the tournament, 13—11, 6—4.

Mitchell vs. Welsh

Mitchell and Welsh join seconds-seeded Hugh Lynch and fourth-seeded Davie Johnsen in the round of four. Semifinal matches will be held at 4 o'clock today, between Mitchell, Welsh, Lynch and Johnsen. This will mark the first time in many years that Welsh and Mitchell have met before the final round.

The Johnsen-Lynch match will give Hugh a chance to prove that Davie's victory over him in the final of the City of Washington tournament was just a fluke.

The stocky Adair, seeded seventh, played unusually well in giving Mitchell one of his toughest fights in years, but tightened up at crucial moments when the imperturbable Mitchell was at his best

Rain Hinders

Adair came from behind in the first set. After rain had halted the proceedings for 20 minutes with Mitchell holding a 4-2 lead, Adair returned to the courts and showed immediate improvement. Playing steadily and combating Dooly's fine drop shots with teasers of his own he deadlocked the count at 4-4 and then took a 5-4 advantage.

Mitchell held his service, however, and it was 5-5. After that Adair had 6—5, 7—6, 9—8, and 11—10 leads but never had a match point on the cool, steady Mitchell who seemed able to get points whenever he needed them badly.

The break of the set came in the twenty-third game when Mitchell crushed Adair's spirit by taking Buddy's service at love. Dooly then closed out the set with the help of three successive errors by Adair in the twenty-fourth game.

Adair held only one lead in the second set. He won the first game. Dooly tied it up on his service and then was in front the rest of the way at 3—2, 4—2, 4—3, 5—3 and 5—4.

Rallies to Win

Shore proved easy for Welsh after the champion came from behind a 4-2 deficit to win the first set.

Failure to take the net behind his troublesome chops which hardly bounced 6 inches on the soggy courts probably cost Shore the first set. He had Barney on the defensive most of the time, but Welsh returned each forcing shot until Shore, never as steady as his opponent, erred.

The doubles semifinal round will be filled today as three matchs are scheduled at 5 o'clock. Top-seeded Mitchell and Welsh meet Pat Deck and Joel Baker; fourth-seeded Shore and Lieut. Russell play Allie Ritzenberg and Billy Turner and Ray Stocklinski and Harry Brinkerhoff engage second-seeded Johnsen and Lynch.

Johnsen is reported suffering from cold in his back and his semifinal singles match with Lynch may be held over until tomorrow.

Young Dempsey To Fight Here

Young Jack Dempsey, whose bout with Frankie Bruno two weeks ago at Griffith Stadium outshone the main attraction, will box the six-round semifinal Monday night when Steve Mamakos meets Frankie Blair in the outdoor ring.

Dempsey, a 19-year-old middleweight handled by Johnny Buckley, will meet Johnny Kaplovitz. No relation to the old Manassa Mauler, Dempsey bears a small resemblance to the former heavyweight champion and showed the crowd a good punch two weeks ago.

Buckley, former manager of former Heavyweight Champion Jack Sharkey, insists his Boston-Italian charge is a future "white hope" heavy. Matchmaker Goldie Ahearn is seeking to line up two heavyweight fights that promise to add color to the local fighting card, which has seen droves of boxing "small fry" in the weight limits this year.

Australia's Cup Team Triumphs

San Antonio, Tex., July 5 (AP).—Showing to advantage, especially in doubles play, Australia's Davis Cup tennis players easily polished off the opposition today in a four-match exhibition.

Adrian Quist and John Bromwich worked like a well-oiled precision machine in trouncing Wilmer Allison and John Van Ryn, of Austin, in three sets, 7—5, 6—4, 6—4. Allison and Van Ryn were once among the world's best doubles combination.

The Americans, just getting into serious training after a long layoff, were erratic.

Battery Nine Plays Chillum Team Sunday

First Half Victor Faces New Threat In League Game

Service Battery, the National City League nine which won the first half of the Section B race in little more than a walk, will be faced by a new threat Sunday as the division goes into its second week of play in the final half. Chillum Heights will be the opponent, and appearances to date indicate the Heightsmen will make Battery's title quest considerably harder. Chillum started in the league last Sunday with a one-sided victory.

Another new club in B section, De Molay, makes its first start, meeting Wade's Auto, though it holds a forfeit victory already. In A section, the midway titlist, Klein Tavern, squares off with Tex Tavern in one feature and D. G. S. and a rejuvenated Cameo Furniture team meet in another.

Congressmen to Play Scribes Tonight at Griffith Stadium

Softball Game Starts at 9 o'Clock Entire Proceeds Will Go to Charity

There will be a lot of huffing and puffing out at Griffith Stadium tonight, but nobody's house will be blown down because it will be just some fellows from the United States Congress playing softball with some newspapermen in a game for the benefit of the National Library of the Blind.

Nineteen Representatives, three Senators and 17 newspapermen—as distinguished a gathering of huffers and puffers as ever you saw—will trot out on the field at 9 p. m. to provide entertainment.

Some 15,000 persons—including Vice President Garner—are expected to attend. President Roosevelt was invited but probably will send his regrets.

Tunney to Umpire

Gene Tunney, retired undefeated world's heavyweight champion, will come to town this afternoon to act as umpire tonight. Celebrities from all walks of Capital life will help make the charity affair a success.

The reason it is known about all the huffing is that the Congress fellows were observed yesterday getting in last-minute batting and running practice in the New House Office Building gymnasium. The Press lads were there, too.

In action, these gentlemen were a sight to behold. The men who make the speeches and the Nation's laws were identified by curious bulges around where their belts ought to be, and the Press characters were observed to have lean and hungry looks.

Intensive Training

It really looks bad for the Congressional boys.

Representative Pius Schwert, of New York, captain of the Congress ten, exuded confidence and a statement at the same time. Said Schwert:

"After what we have done to such things as economy measures and relief in the way of winning we expect to have no trouble with our opposition."

The Press lads in the other end of the gym aroused themselves from intensive training sessions at checkers and tit-tat-toe and rallied around their captain, Eric Friedheim, of the International News Service.

"We have given these Congressmen a beating before and we can do it again," chortled the Gentlemen of the Press. Debates immediately sprang up on all sides. Shouts of "Mr. Speaker" were heard.

Gates Open at 7:30

The question of playing softball on a baseball diamond has been easily solved. Home plate will be at third base tonight at Griffith Stadium, and the softball infield will be the regular outfield.

Gates will open at 7:30 p. m., and at 7:45 the Washington Gas Light Band will give a concert. Beautiful contestants for the title, "Miss Washington," will parade at 8:30 p. m., and each team will pick a mascot.

'Cobra' Hold Challenge Gets Taker

Gray, Perennial Fan, May Accept $500 Offer of Singh

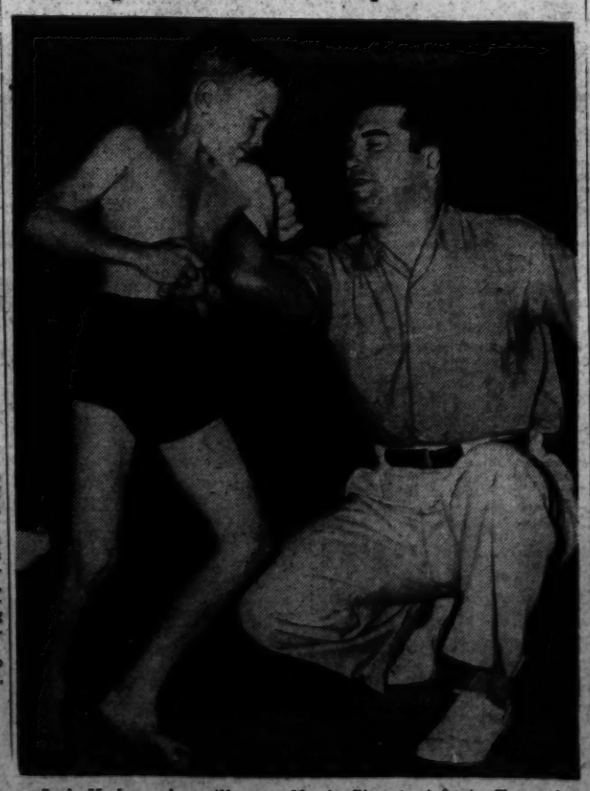
Nanjo Singh, who will swap groans tonight at Turner's Arena, with Jack Hader, may be the first wrestling gentleman ever to demonstrate with the promoter's permission his trade on a ringside fan, if the vow of an old-time heckler is carried out.

Walter Gray, long identified with rows A, B, and C at the local ring, has announced to one and all he will step into the ring and let the Hindu apply the "cobra deathlock" on him.

Singh's offer of $500 to any man who can break away from the clutch is understood to have brought on Gray's intentions. Promoter Joe Turner's agents cast all manner of confusion over the issue last night with the mysterious statement that Gray has been training with Turner, but that both Turner and Gray deny this fact.

The overture tonight will feature Laverne Baxter against Hank Metheny, Jim Clinstock and Bibber McCoy, Rosy Red Ryan and Ed White, and Pete Managoff and Tom Mahoney—time, 8:30 p. m.; place, Turner's Arena.

'Young Jack' Hader Helps Dad Train



Jack Hader, who will meet Nanjo Sing tonight in Turner's Arena, gives his 11-year-old son, Weythe, a few pointers on the wrestling game. "Young Jack," who came to Washington recently from his Kansas school, insists he is going to follow in his father's footsteps

Danny Burton Signed as Pro At Quantico

Former Army-Navy Mentor to Assume New Post Today

BURTON

The red-haired mentor, who left the service club several weeks ago, will succeed Eddie Koehler, the former American Association ball player, who deserted the diamond for a pro career. Koehler has taken a position at the Indianhead munitions plant.

Burton will have complete charge of the golf shop, with concessions, club storage, and lessons, in addition to a salary.

For the last 7½ years Danny divided the professional duties at Army and Navy with his older brother, Allan, who is now professional at the Virginia club. He started caddying at Chevy Chase at the age of 9, and Robert T. Barnett took him into the golf shop a few years later. He worked eight years at Chevy Chase, including the time he was caddying, and was recognized as one of the most promising young pro golfers in the city.

Burton will remain in the Middle Atlantic P. G. A. area, and after getting settled will take an active part in the local tournaments. The Quantico golf team plays several matches with local clubs throughout the year. M. W. W.

Gene Mako Scores At Louisville

Louisville, Ky., July 5 (AP).—Gene Mako, of Los Angeles, the Nation's top-ranking amateur while Bobby Riggs is playing in England, got started two days late in the Kentucky Open Tennis Tournament, but caught up by scoring two straight-set victories today.

Mako, seeded No. 1, eliminated Charles Spencer, of Louisville, and Elwood Jensen, of Springfield, Ohio, by identical scores of 6—0, 6—1.

Frank Guernsey, jr., Rice Institute's national intercollegiate champion from Orlando, Fla., seeded fifth, squeaked past thirteenth seeded Ed Alloo, San Francisco star, 3—6, 6—3, 7—5, to enter the quarter-finals.

Ernie Gessel Favorite In Midget Auto Race

With the ranks of midget auto race drivers rapidly thinning from accidents, Ernie Gessel, of Freeport, Long Island, yesterday appeared the favorite to win the national A. A. A. championship here July 18 when the new speedway will be opened.

Eddie Staneck, last year's champion, was killed three weeks ago when he cracked up on a Philadelphia race. Gessel was 1937 champion. Promoter Jimmy Frattone yesterday said the track is rapidly being worked into shape and the skeleton of the grand stand has been erected.

Fitzsimmons And Dodgers Beat Phils, 7-1

Fat Freddy Only One Run—a Homer In First Inning

By the Associated Press.

Brooklyn, July 5.—With fat Freddy Fitzsimmons performing a successful six-hit pitching operation, the Brooklyn Dodgers lambasted the Philadelphia Phillies, 7 to 1, today to sweep their three-game series.

The only run Old Fitz allowed was a homer by Emmett Mueller in the first inning. But the Dodgers made 12 hits off Kirby Higbee and had two big innings.

In the second they scored three times on three singles and two wild throws and in the fifth they got four more on a walk, a hit batsman, an error and three hits—the climax a double by Rookie Art Parks.

Ival Goodman Hurt As Reds Beat Cards, 6-2

By the Associated Press.

Cincinnati, July 5.—Bucky Walters held the third-place St. Louis Cards to four hits today as the Reds punched out a 6 to 2 victory that maintained their five-game advantage at the top of the National League.

Getting away to a one-run lead in the first, the Rhinelanders never were headed as Walters, earning his twelfth victory of the season, blanked the invaders through four innings. In the fifth, with two away, Don Gutteridge whaled the ball over the leftfield wall for a homer—his team's second hit. In the eighth the Cards put together a walk, a single and a double for the final tally.

The men of McKechnie struck misfortune, however, even as they got first to Tom Sunkel, then Bob Bowman, then Clyde Shoun for their victory. With one away in the fifth, Rightfilder Ival Goodman beat out a tap to the plate and Owen's throw struck him in the head just as he crossed first base.

Dazed, he ran about 100 feet—into the Cards' bull pen—then collapsed. Teammates helped him from the field and he was taken to a hospital.

Hubbell and Giants Break Bees Jinx, 11-7

By the Associated Press.

Boston, July 5.—Carl Hubbell, relegated to relief roles now, pitched three innings of hitless, runless ball today for his first victory in seven weeks as the New York Giants rallied four runs in the ninth to take a slugging session from the Boston Bees, 11 to 7.

The triumph broke a jinx the Bees had held over the Giants at Boston, which saw them win seven straight games here starting last September.

With CONSIDINE

New York, July 5.—When good-looking Billy Conn, the Currier and Ives boxing boy, came along to give a fancy lacing to such battlers as Fred Apostoli, Solly Krieger, Joe Dundee, Babe Risko and Tedd Yaroscz, a lot of boxing people sighed and wished the fellow was bigger—so he could some day fight Joe Louis.

CONSIDINE

Now, because of a tonsilectomy, they may get their wish. Conn, who fights Mario Bettina next week for the light-heavyweight title, weighed 185 pounds, when he started his current training. The Pittsburgh stylist weighed only seven pounds over the 160-pound middleweight maximum, when he defeated Apostoli. Now he may have a little trouble making the 175-pound light heavyweight limit. And the way he is growing, since being deprived of his tonsils, indicates that even if he beats Bettina he may have to give up the title—even though this championship match will be his first formal appearance in the division.

Looks, Fights Like Movie Hero

He is expected to be fighting heavyweights before the indoor season is over—this fancy fellow who fights like the hero in a movie. If he loses to Bettina, Conn will become the victim of some kind of a record for physical growth.

Conn started out as a lightweight and fought two or three good fights, but he was deprived of a chance at the topflight men because by that time he had grown into a welterweight. He looked so good as a welter that he got a crack at Fritzie Zivic, at that time a leading welter, and beat him. But before he could capitalize on that he had become a middleweight. As a middleweight he beat three former champions but couldn't get the title before outgrowing the division. As an over-the-weight middleweight he beat the two men who claimed the middle title, Apostoli and Krieger. And now, if he blows next week's fight against Bettina, it appears likely that his constantly increasing poundage will militate against his being able to wait for a return match for the light-heavy crown.

If it is of any comfort to him, it might be mentioned here that there is no limit to the heavyweight division. And that Jack Dempsey, the tiger man, weighed only 182 the afternoon—20 years ago today—that he "slew" Jess Willard.

You'll Like the Racing in Puerto Rico

If you are one of those bettors who hate to plunk money on a horse if it's a top-heavy favorite, you'd like the racing in Puerto Rico. Basil Gallagher forwards me a little treatise from Rio Piedras, concerning the Puerto Rican method of conducting racing at Las Casas, Las Monjas, Quintana and Mira Palmeras—the four tracks in operation.

No bets are taken on a favorite. The track handicapper decides which is the outstanding nag in each gallop, and he is barred from the betting if he wins, the owner gets the winner's purse, and those who bet on the second horse cash in their win tickets. Sometimes the handicapper bars two horses from the betting, and if they run 1-2 the holders of win tickets on the third plug cash in.

Puerto Ricans do most of their betting in a special pool. For 25 cents they get a chance to pick the seven winners on a day's race card. As many as 40 or 50 share the daily pay-off from this form of betting, and the reason so many hit the jackpot is because there is rarely more than one good horse in each race.

The Johnstown of Puerto Rico is Cofresi, owned by Pepe Coll-Vidal, owner of the newspaper El Mundo. It hasn't been beaten in three years. The Man o' War of the island was Galgo, jr., a grandson of Man o' War, incidentally. He raced in the late 1920's and early '30's, won 48 in a row and had his streak broken by a glue-works galloper named Puerta de Tierra, who bit a filet-mignon out of the flank of Galgo, jr., as the latter flashed down the home stretch. It stunned Galgo, jr., so much that he quit cold, and it precipitated as nasty a scandal as ever hit this curious sector of racing.

Finding of 'Indian' Penny in Pool Wins Hunt at Y.M.C.A.

The novel swimming event staged at the Central Y. M. C. A. yesterday under the direction of E. Holt Neese—a "penny hunting contest"—was won by Robert Soter, of 626 Jefferson street northwest, when he brought up an Indian head penny after 34 minutes of search. It was the only coin of the kind out of 100 pennies thrown into the pool for the hunt.

Because he brought up 21 of the pennies, Henry Hopkins, of 2219 H street northwest, was adjudged the champion "bringer upper." Next week, for a change, baby turtles will be released in the pool and a search for them will follow. P. S.—The boys were allowed to keep the pennies they found.

Lorton Blues Rally To Beat Tigers, 6-4

Five runs in the third inning brought the Lorton Blues out of a 3-0 deficit in their game with the Takoma Tigers yesterday and paved the way for a 6-to-4 victory on the reformatory diamond. Geesling's three hits in four times paced the winners' stickwork, while R. Easton was best for the losers with two hits in three times.

Enthusiasm, Paying $26.20, Wins Feature at Charles Town

7-Year-Old Gelding Comes From Far Back to Triumph; Double Pays $91

By Walter Haight

A Staff Correspondent.

Charles Town, W. Va., July 5.—Mrs. John Hay Whitney's Enthusiasm, after showing dull form in recent races, found the sloppy track and the appearance of Jockey Leon Garrett in his saddle the necessary tonic for a smashing exhibition here today. The 7-year-old gelding came from far back to win by a neck over W. Royle's Lady Buck with H. M. Luttrell's Beaming Lady in third position.

The victory came the hard way for Enthusiasm but the gelding also was lucky to score. However, the price of $26.20 was in the same cold cash that they pay here on favorites. The contest was over a course deep in muddy water as the result of driving showers just before the program began. Enthusiasm was clocked in 0:51 1/5 for the 4½ furlongs.

Enthusiasm looked far from a winner at the start when Garrett got him away from the starting gate. The gelding had one horse beaten after the first 20 yards. Time Her was hustled to the front to be accompanied by Lady Buck. Palumbo, on the latter, elected to stay behind Time Her until the far turn. At this stage, Palumbo chose to take Lady Buck outside of the pacemaker.

Swinging for the stretch, Time Her began running out and carried Lady Buck with her. Palumbo pulled up sharply. In the meanwhile, Garrett had been hustling Enthusiasm up along the rail. At the final bend, Enthusiasm fairly skirted the fence while Lady Buck, in motion again, came on. But Enthusiasm had gotten to the front and the ancient gelding kept plugging.

The daily double combination of Hi Blaze and Bubbleworth paid $91 for each $2 ticket.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—CHARMING BOY, $9.00, $4.20, $3.00; PANDORAMINT, $3.00, $2.40; NAY NAY, $2.60.

CHARMING BOY disposed of ROYAL VEIL to take good lead and was not seriously threatened thereafter while under good handling. PANDORAMINT, shuffled back going to turn, drove through on inside after three furlongs, but was held safe by winner. NAY NAY lacked speed throughout. FLAG ETTA had early foot and stopped. ROYAL VEIL quit.

FIFTH RACE—Charles Town course. Purse, $500; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start poor. Won easily; place driving. Went to post 4:31. Off 4:32. Winner, M. Lobeck's ch. f. (4), by Purchase—Chatelet. Trained by G. Manley. Value to winner, $350; second, $75; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 1:19.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—CHASTE, $12.40, $5.80, $4.20; TIMBER LADY, $3.60, $2.80; LENA GIRL, $3.20.

CHASTE, headied along close to pace of TIMBER LADY after reaching contention through hustling tactics, took command when pacemaker ran out and drew clear to win easily. TIMBER LADY escaped trouble at first turn to get to front, ran out entering stretch and came again when straightened. LENA GIRL was bumped repeatedly at first turn, moved up on outside along backstretch and hung in closing drive. LEAD PLEASE went in air at break and showed good effort. BROWN CHAIN went well placed for three furlongs. ROSIN stopped.

SIXTH RACE—About 4½ furlongs. Purse, $800. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:57½. Off 5:00. Winner, Mrs. J. H. Whitney's ch. g. (7), by Bubbling Over—Trifling. Trained by Q. Jackson. Value to $600; second, $125; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 0:51 1-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—ENTHUSIASM, $26.20, $9.20, $5.00; LADY BUCK, $4.00, $2.80; BEAMING LADY, $3.20.

ENTHUSIASM, off slowly, came up on inside to reach contention, saved much ground entering stretch and held on in final test. LADY BUCK, close to pace of TIME HER, was carried wide by winner entering stretch, was taken up and came gamely after regaining stride. BEAMING LADY was off poorly, improved position steadily and was going gamely at end. TIME HER rushed to the front in opening furlong, but lost chance when she ran out at stretch turn. ROMNEY ROYAL could not keep up. TRAUMERIE was through early.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $400; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post 5:26½. Off 5:28 1/5. Winner, G. T. Stroker's b. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—BOSOPI, $23.60, $8.40, $5.80; SEA FINN, $4.20, $3.20; LUCKY ROLL, $4.80.

BOSOPI came around horses to get to front after opening quarter, was hard ridden and held SEA FINN safe in closing stages. SEA FINN lacked early speed, worked way to contention, but hung while placed to punishment in closing test. LUCKY ROLL had to be hustled to reach forward position and weakened. WHICH BLOND lacked early foot and closed some ground. JIMMY D. was used up running with JUDITH B. and stopped. JUDITH B. had early speed and faltered.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $400; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start poor. Won driving; place same. Went to post 5:56. Off 5:59½. Winner, A. Fox's b. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—TRIVET, $6.60, $5.00, $3.80; HAGERSTOWN BOY, $8.40, $4.40; BROOKE HEROD, $4.40.

TRIVET shook off HAGERSTOWN BOY to take lead and under hard riding held away to end. HAGERSTOWN BOY forced and set early pace and continued gamely when displaced. BROOKE HEROD was blocked repeatedly throughout running. HEART PLAY moved up menacingly from slow beginning and tired at end. VENETIAN was held safe. PRINCE KHAYYAM was placed three lengths in back of gate on outside for start, moved to contention under hard riding and weakened badly. LADY DUNLIN had early speed and stopped.

McLeod's Mark In P. G. A. Up To Local Pros

Spencer, Shorey Carry Local Hopes In Pomonok Tourney

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

The District's two entries in the P. G. A. championship at Pomonok Country Club, Flushing, Long Island, left yesterday for the scene of the event that starts Sunday with Paul Runyan seeking a second straight title and his third in the history of the event. Cliff Spencer and Mel Shorey are the players.

One of the greatest fields in history, minus only Craig Wood, a nonqualifier, and Denny Shute, who neglected to send in his entry in time, but including Walter Hagen, Gene Sarazen, Ralph Guldahl and Sammy Snead, will battle for the prize money, in the vicinity of $15,000.

Except for Freddie McLeod's performance in the first P. G. A. match play championship in 1919, where the Columbia professional went to the finals before losing to the great Jim Barnes, District pros have not fared well in the championship.

Unique Record

Leo Walper and Al Houghton boast quarter-final performances, Robert T. Barnett, Chevy Chase pro, went to the second round, while George Diffenbaugh was a first-round victim, after qualifying for the match play. Wiffy Cox has the unique record of qualifying six times for match play, but losing each time to his initial opponent. In 1923 his conqueror was McLeod.

Spencer and Shorey are each playing well enough at present to eclipse any of the performances but McLeod's. Neither have ever qualified for match play before, although Shorey has made the grade sectionally, but failed in qualifying on the scene of the event.

The tournament is being played over a 6,300-yard course, one suited to Shorey's type of golf, and once the East Potomac mentor gets his famed putting stroke working he may cause trouble. Spencer is playing the best golf of his career, at times, and five 67s this year, three for course records, indicate he is capable of a brand of golf that could cause a little excitement among the big shot pros.

140 Pros Entered

Sunday and Monday the entire field of approximately 140 pros will play an 18-hole medal round per day, with the 64 low totals qualifying for match-play rounds. Tuesday will find 48 of the contestants on the sidelines after a pair of 18-hole matches, and the third round, quarter, semifinals and finals will be over the 36-hole route.

The prize money is distributed among the entire field of sectional qualifiers, and thus only $1,100 goes to the winner. But, as in the National Open, the winner figures to make between $15,000 and $25,000 off the championship, depending on his color, popularity, etc.

The beaten 32 Tuesday morning will receive $100 each, the beaten 16, $150; the beaten 8 in the third round, $200; the 4 beaten quarter-finalists, $250; the 2 beaten semi-finalists, $350, and the runner-up, $600.

Gets Expense Money

In addition the nonqualifiers get mileage to the tournament on the basis of 2 cents per mile for the first 2,000 miles, 2½ cents the next 2,000 miles, and 3 cents per mile all over 4,000. Contestants within 50 miles of the championship will receive mileage expenses.

Thus if a qualifier from the Pacific Coast travels 3,000 miles each way, for a total of 6,000 miles, he would receive $150 in expense money. If he qualified for match play and lost in the first round, he would receive $100 and any difference between that amount and his expenses.

Last year both Wiffy Cox and Leo Walper qualified, but lost in the first round to Johnny Revolta and Gene Sarazen, respectively. Spencer and Shorey will both have three days for practice, and if they play in the tournament anything like their sectional qualifying scores at Indian Spring or the match at Washington last Sunday, they may set a record for District pros' performances in the event again—except for McLeod's.

Cards' Famous Scout, Chas. Barrett, Dies

St. Louis, July 5 (AP)—Charles Barrett, 68, widely known scout for the St. Louis Cardinals' baseball club, died from a heart attack late last night.

A big league scout since 1909, he had been with the Cards more than 20 years. Barrett was credited with discovering such stars as Jim Bottomley, Charley Grimm, Bill Killefer, Art Fletcher, Ray Blades, Pepper Martin and Muddy Ruel.

N. Y. Grid Giants Get Aggie Passing Star

New York, July 5 (AP)—The New York Giants, National Football League Champions, announced today they had signed Eddie Miller, sensational forward passer with the New Mexico Aggies last season.

A chunky youngster weighing only 170 pounds, Miller completed 114 tosses out of 194 attempts, 12 of them going for touchdowns.

Baering Down

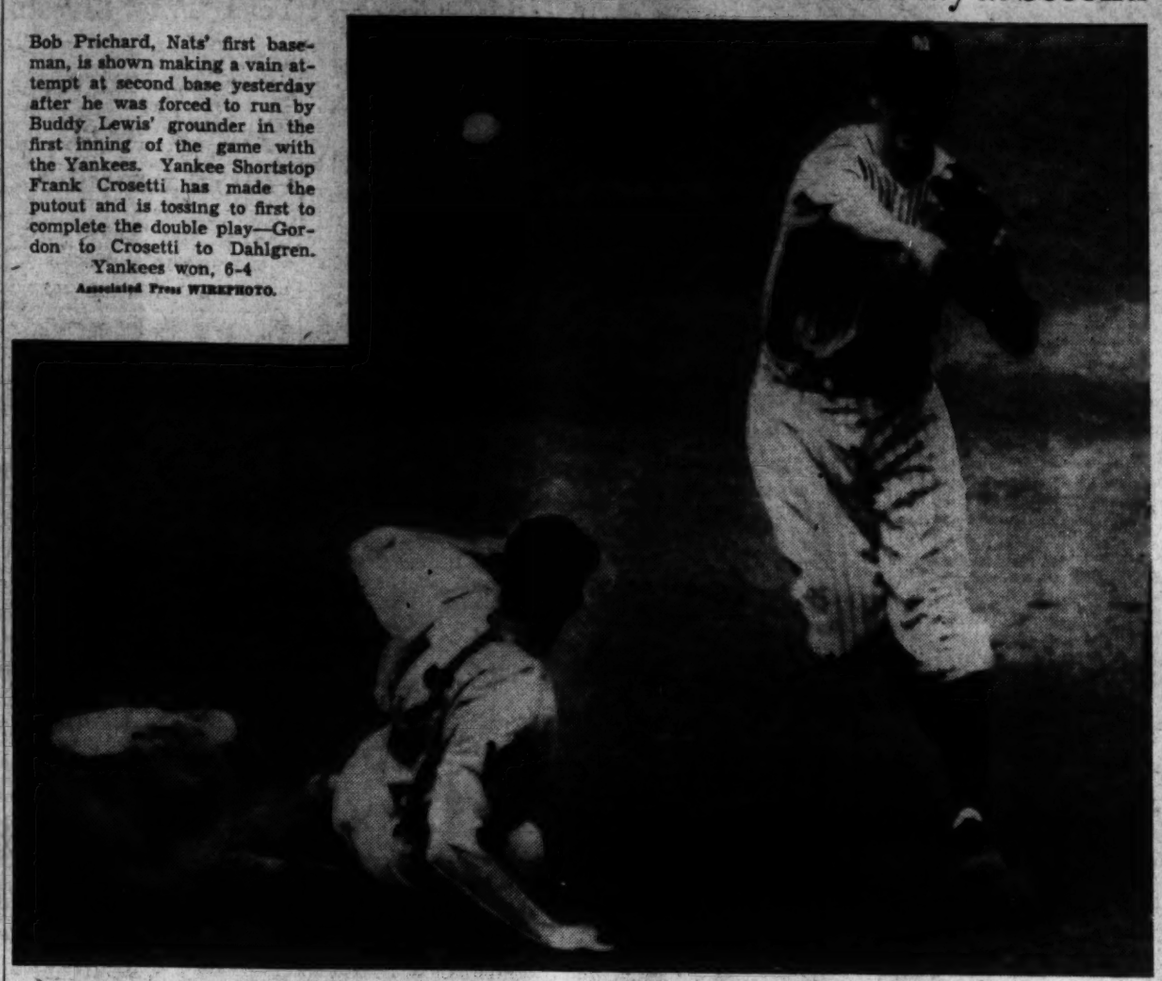
Where we need a peacemaker most is down in Washington. He would have a steadier job than a man feeding corn to a hog.

There's a three-cornered battle on between Congress, the Senate and the White House. Mr. Roosevelt has to talk big enough to put the Senate in its place. But not loud enough to get Carter Glass out of bed.

It's jumpy down there and tempers are shorter than turtle tails. The baseball team is in sixth place and it's hot. We advise any Senator invited to the White House pool to stay away from the deep end.

Here's One Reason the Nats Didn't Win—Double Play at Second



Bob Prichard, Nats' first baseman, is shown making a vain attempt at second base yesterday after he was forced to run by Buddy Lewis' grounder in the first inning of the game with the Yankees. Yankee Shortstop Frank Crosetti has made the putout and is tossing to first to complete the double play—Gordon to Crosetti to Dahlgren. Yankees won, 6-4

All of a sudden in the eighth inning, the Nats started acting like the Yanks. After Wright popped up, Cecil Travis unsheathed a long home run into the rightfield seats, his third of the season. And Buddy Myer, who followed him to the plate, swatted one into the same section. But the rally expired on a fly by Welaj and a pop-up by Early.

Krakky Relieves

Joe Krakauskas relieved Chase at the start of the seventh and struck out two batters, but he pitched a two-bagger to Rolfe and a run was averted only because Sammy West, like the West of old, scampered against the centerfield wall and with a leaping one-hand catch hauled down DiMaggio's bid for his second homer of the day.

DiMaggio evened matters, though, in the ninth when he gave chase to Pinch-hitter Boddy Estalella's terrific clout and gathered it in on the run. Sammy West drew a walk, but Prichard popped up and Gelbert flied out and the Nats were a gone gang.

Riggs and Cooke Gain Tennis Final time and let the Yugoslavian win six games to love. But always with supreme confidence. Bobby won when and as he liked.

In some ways Cooke is even more surprising. Even the U. S. L. T. A. didn't think he was good enough to pay his full expenses over here but he eliminated top-seeded Bunny Austin and today looked like a champion in trimming Henkel.

Even this morning, Cooke started the 3-to-2 under dog in the betting, but 15 minutes after he got on the center court he had four games tucked away to love. And while he had to battle all the way, only occasionally did Henkel manage to dominate the play.

In fairness it must be said Cooke got his share of the breaks. Leading, 4—3, in the first set, with Henkel serving, Cooke won the eighth game when one of his back hand drives hit the top of the net and just crawled over. Before Henkel got over that break Cooke had taken the next game at love for set.

Forcing Tactics

Henkel's rally in the second set was due to his forcing tactics at the net, but in the ninth game of the third he came in once too often. Racing in after a deep forehand drive, the German was left stranded at the net by a perfect lob and on the next serve Cooke beat him with a superb half-volley and took the game for the lead. The American won the next game to love for set and never was behind again.

You'd think Cooke and Riggs would be satisfied with a day like that. Not a chance. After their singles matches they sat togehter in the locker room, complaining about their mistakes and telling each other how much better they'd be in the finals Friday. And they still were talking about it when they went out together to play in the doubles.

Fourth Victory

In addition to Cooke and Riggs in the men's doubles, the United States still has Defending Champions Mrs. Fabyan and Miss Marble and Helen Jacobs paired with Billy Yorke, of England, in the women's doubles and Riggs and Miss Marble and Cooke and Mrs. Fabyan in the mixed doubles.

Mrs. Fabyan and Miss Marble won their fourth round match today, defeating Gracyn Wheeler, of Santa Monica, Calif., and Mlle. Somogyi, of Rumania, 4—6, 6—0, 6—0. Don McNeill, of Oklahoma City, and Kay Stammers, of England, were eliminated in the mixed doubles, 6—4, 6—4, 3—6, 6—1, by Frank Wilde and Mrs. N. B. Brown, of Great Britain.

Man of the Month

By Walter Johnson.

(WJSV-General Mills Broadcaster.)

Cecil Travis and Sammy West share the chief awards in the latest distribution of points in the Man of the Month contest on the basis of yesterday's game against the Yankees.

To Travis, four points, because he drove in the Nats' first run with a two-base hit and because he hit a homer in the eighth inning.

To West, four points, because he doubled and walked three times in five turns at bat, and because he made two spectacular catches in centerfield with men on bases.

To Buddy Myer, two points, because he hit a home run and played a brilliant game in the field.

The totals:

Cecil Travis	9	Rick Ferrell	3
Buddy Lewis	6	Buddy Myer	3
Dutch Leonard	6	Tony Giuliani	2
Johnny Welaj	4	Joe Krakauskas	2
Jim Bloodworth	4	Joe Haynes	2

Pirate Spree In 3d Beats Cubs, 10 to 1

3-Run Homer Caps Uprising as Bucs Chase Root, Russell

By the Associated Press

Pittsburgh, July 5.—The Pittsburgh Pirates broke out with a rash of thumping base hits today behind clever hurling by Joe Bowman and pasted back the flopping ears of Chicago's Cubs by a 10-to-1 count.

A seven-run upsurge in the third, climaxed by Pep Young's three-run home run just inside the leftfield foul line, chased the hard-working Charley Root and assured the victory to the Bucs.

Jack Russell retired eight men in a row after relieving Root, then gave up five straight hits before Gene Lillard went to the rescue.

Bowman would have had a shutout except for two errors by his mates in the ninth, helping Carl Nettles Reynolds to score the lone Cub run.

Hewett Tells How He 'Stole' Catcher Mack

Signed Connie for $3,000; Three Other Clubs Sought Mack

with the National League, Mack got $2,500. The next year he was paid $3,000, which was a high figure at that time, Hewett explained. Most of the players of the Nationals were Government clerks who played just to get to make the trips with the team.

"We had the real thing in those days, and we didn't play for the money there was in it," he said. "We only got $150 per game and traveling expenses."

Although one of the big figures in baseball in the late 80s, Hewett is firmly convinced that the present-day habit of substitution in baseball is hurting the game.

Game Confusing Today

"Listen, I went out here to a game in 1930 and saw 32 players trotting over the field by the time the game ended," he complained. "What kind of baseball is that? I like to keep a score card when I go to a game, but this thing of putting one man in and then having him fade away is too confusing. There's no sport in it.

"We were only allowed to have 18 men in a game. If we wanted to swap an outfielder for a pitcher, that was all right, but there was none of this substitution. That called for real managerial strategy. The nine men you put in there had to play the whole game. I've seen pitchers get banged for the first two innings and then not give up a hit the rest of the game. Now they jerk them out. I haven't been to a game since that one in 1930. When they called out all those men I tore up my score card and went home. I was disgusted."

The Nationals were in the old Union League in 1884 and the Eastern League the following year, before finally getting in the National League in 1886. Hewett's father became president of the club the same year and held office until his death, when his son succeeded him, in the custom of the day.

Mack Sparked Team

Active and spry as a man 20 years younger, Hewett is now 78—two years older than Mack—but he is a walking history book when it comes to baseball. At 10, he traveled with the 1871 Nationals through the West when they met the great Cincinnati Red Stockings.

"I was asked to go up to Cooperstown for the centennial celebration, but I didn't go—there wouldn't be any of the old fellows of my day up there, except possibly Connie Mack," Hewett said.

"You know, I suppose I made a mistake when I didn't put Mack in as a manager instead of continuing to catch him," he mused. "But he was young and just learning the game then."

Although Mack played with the Nationals before the introduction of the catcher's mitt, he was a great spark to the team, Hewett recalled.

"When we had Jim Whitney pitching and Connie catching we seldom lost a game," he said. "Of course, the catchers in those days did not come up behind the bat as they do today, but played way back. Sometimes on the third strike they moved up into position."

When the "Brotherhood," or Players League was formed in 1890, Hewett lost most of his players—including Mack.

"I never could understand why that league only lasted the one season," he said. "They had the National League whipped to a frazzle."

When the Nationals rejoined the National League in 1892, Hewett tried to get Mack to sign up but he was with Pittsburgh and on the road to his managerial career.

4 Seeded Stars Score Easily in Gold Cup Tennis

North Conway, N. H., July 5 (AP). The four seeded stars romped through their opening matches in the eastern slope gold racquet tournament today, but two famous veterans met with speedy misfortune as major tennis returned to the White Mountains after a lapse of more than 30 years.

Frank Shields, of New York, runner-up for both the national and British titles before he temporarily retired, drew a first-round tartar in Gordon Reeder, of Kenyon College, Gambier, Ohio. Reeder overcame a 2—4 deficit in the final set and pulled out, 6—2, 4—6, 7—5.

J. Gilbert Hall, South Orange, N. J., lost to Jack Bushman, of Baton Rouge, La. The score was 7—5, 6—1.

Top-seeded Wayne Sabin, of Portland, Oreg., breezed into the second round by defeating R. N. Cunningham, of Exeter, 6—1, 6—2.

Hal Surface, of Kansas City, ranked second in the draw, topped Tom Stokes, of New Orleans, 6—3, 6—4, and Ernie Sutter, of New Orleans, seeded third, overcame Hendrick Kulik, of Salem, Mass., 6—2, 6—3.

Cardinals Split At Charlottesville

Beaten out, 9—8, in a heartbreaker ball game Sunday, the Washington Cardinals came back Tuesday to split a double-header with Charlottesville, Va., winning the first, 5 to 1, and losing the nightcap, 5 to 4. Batting star of the two games was Len Sokol, former Central High outfielder, who had two doubles and three singles in eight times at bat. Price's six-hit pitching won the first game, and Jennings was tapped for ten safeties in the second clash.

Californians Lead Eastern Net Tourney

Montclair, N. J., July 5 (AP).—Douglas Imhoff and Robert Peacock, National Intercollegiate doubles tennis champions from the University of California, paced the field in the Eastern Intercollegiate tournament into the semifinal round today.

Imhoff and Peacock, seeded second, scored over Robert Low and Myron Folsom, of Stanford, 6—0, 6—3. Smashing beautifully, they breezed through the contest in 35 minutes.

Eddie Sims Beaten In Chicago Bout

Chicago, July 5 (AP).—Henry Wacker, Taylorville, Ill., Negro heavyweight, won a close 10-round decision over Eddie Simms, of Cleveland, tonight. Simms went down for a one count in the first round, but bounced back to make it a close fight the rest of the distance. Wacker weighed 194½ and Simms 195½.

Maxie Berger Beats Ramey in Montreal

Montreal, July 5 (AP).—Maxie Berger, of Montreal, erased two previous defeats by Wesley Ramey tonight by soundly thumping the Grand Rapids (Mich.) battler and winning a unanimous decision in a ten-round bout before 4,000 fans.

Berger, weighing 139½, had a 6¾ pull in the weights.

Where to Hold Carnival Puzzles Takoma Firemen

Whether to hold a carnival and, if so, where, is the problem facing officials in charge of the annual Takoma Park Volunteer Fire Department Carnival, planned for July 31 to August 5.

The committee on arrangements had picked the lot adjoining the fire department at the busy intersection of Carroll and Sycamore avenues. Yesterday, however, it was notified that construction of the new shopping center will begin prior to the opening date.

Fire Chief Dewey Hayes will call an "emergency meeting" of officials to decide on a new site if necessary.

$17,909,834 Under March But Top Year Ago by $16,951,915

Following a call yesterday by the Comptroller of the Currency for the condition of all national banks in the United States and all banks in the District of Columbia, the 22 Washington banks reported as of June 30 a total of $323,809,523.24 deposits. Eleven local banks reported lower deposits compared with the previous call on March 29 and 11 reported higher totals.

Bankers say that the lower total for June 30 was caused by heavy withdrawals during the month because of the intangible property tax. Deposit of the 22 local institutions were as follows:

Metropolis Building Election

All officers and directors were re-elected at the annual meeting of the Metropolis Building Association held yesterday. Harry G. Wilson will again direct the affairs of the city's second oldest home financing organization which began business in 1866. John Scrivener continues as vice president, Rudolph W. Santelmann, secretary, and Henry E. Tripp, treasurer. Directors include George N. Seibert, William A. Simpson, Henry M. Wiegand, Martin T. Wiegand, Arthur Seagren and Harry H. Wilson in addition to the officers.

Mr. Santelman announced that during the remodelling and enlarging of the banking room at 201 Pennsylvania avenue southeast the affairs of the Metropolis will be conducted at 300 B street southeast. It is expected that the improved quarters will be available for occupancy around October 1. Santelmann reports that assets are in excess of $5,700,000 and that the surplus account has risen to $515,000.

Stock Purchases Are Disclosed By United Corp.

New York, July 5 (AP).—United Corporation made public today the list of new portfolio securities acquired between March 17 and June 30, representing an aggregate investment of $2,446,712. In total share lots ranging from 900 to 4,000 in the open market United bought securities of the following companies:

American Can Co., Chrysler Corp., E. I. DuPont de Nemours & Co., Eastman Kodak Co., General Electric Co., General Mills, Inc., General Motors Corporation, International Harvester Co., International Nickel Co. of Canada, Ltd., Phelps Dodge Corporation, Proctor & Gamble Co., Sears, Roebuck & Co., Union Carbide & Carbon Corp., United Fruit Co., and F. W. Woolworth Co.

In line with its agreement with the Securities & Exchange Commission last March 13, changing over from a public utilities holding company to an investment company, the acquisitions listed were the first part of a total permitted expenditure of $8,000,000 in the period ending September 13. The corporation previously explained that unsettled international political conditions had tended to delay purchases.

The company did not sell any portfolio securities during the period, nor were any changes made in the portfolio of New York United, a wholly owned subsidiary, George Howard, president, said.

Utility Settles 80 Million Taxes For 8.7 Million

By the Associated Press

The Associated Gas and Electric System settled, yesterday, for $8,700,000 an estimated $80,000,000 of delinquent Federal tax claims. The system, one of the largest utility holding companies in the country, cleaned up tax disputes covering the years 1927-33, inclusive, by the settlement.

It paid $3,000,000 in cash and won permission to pay the balance within 30 months.

The down payment, officials explained, was borrowed by the company after the Treasury lifted tax liens to enable the system to offer would-be lenders better security.

The tax controversy arose over differing interpretations of deductions from its income claimed by the system because of various intercompany transactions and because of the shrinkage in the market value of company securities during the depression.

The tax controversy aroused particular attention because the associated system was one of the most vigorous foes of the 1935 public utility holding company act.

Uncertainties Hold Cotton in Narrow Range

New York, July 5 (AP).—Operations in the cotton futures market were affected today by the continued uncertainty surrounding Congressional action on monetary problems. Final prices were unchanged to 3 points lower.

Morning turnover, which represented new crop buying by Bombay interests and trade and short covering in nearby positions, was the heaviest of the day. Small gains then only partially reflected improved Liverpool prices.

Trading slackened later and when five delivery notices issued against the July contract circulated, selling picked up. This was countered by a renewal of demand which carried prices 2 to 7 points above Monday's range.

Demand in turn dried up and Southern and local selling put quotations back close to the days' lows.

June Stock Values Fall 2.225 Billion

New York, July 5 (AP).—The New York Stock Exchange reported today the market value of its listed shares declined in June nearly $2,225,000,000. The total market value of 1,234 stocks listed at the end of June, the exchange reported, was $41,004,995,092, against $43,229,587,173 for 1,233 issues at the end of May. The total a year ago was $41,961,875,154 for 1,256 issues. The average market value of the listed shares was $28.70, compared with $30.29 at the close of May and $29.41 a year ago.

Wheat Rises With Higher Foreign Prices

Gains as Much as ¾ of A Cent Despite Heavy Receipts of Winter Crop

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, July 5.—Firmness of foreign markets aided wheat here today and gains of ¾ cent a bushel were scored at times. The close was ⅞@¾ up.

Liverpool, due lower on the basis of action here Monday, closed ½ to ¾ cent higher. The English market was aided by decreasing pressure of Argentine shipments. Winnipeg closed ⅜@⅝ up and other American markets reflected the upturn. Kansas City closed ⅝@¾ up and Minneapolis 1@1⅛ higher.

Despite liberal receipts of new winter wheat, estimated at 6,696,000 at 12 principal terminals during the past two days, hedge selling offerings were small and easily absorbed. After a minor initial decline the market steadied and then advanced. Improvement in the July 1 private crop estimates was anticipated and these had little effect on the market.

Corn Also Higher

July wheat here closed at 68⅛@ 68¾ and September at 70. Other grains, excepting soy beans, also advanced. Corn closed ¼@⅜ up, July, 46¾@46⅞; September, 48⅛; oats ⅜@½ up, soy beans ½ up to 1¼ off, rye ¼@⅜ up, lard 5 to 8 cents higher.

The average of six private crop reports placed probable wheat production at 721,000,000 bushels, an increase of 21,000,000 compared with the estimates a month ago. The winter wheat average was 525,000,000 bushels, up 9,000,000 and for spring wheat 196,000,000, or 12,000,000 bushels more than the average of the estimates a month ago. Estimates for corn production this year averaged 2,557,000,000 bushels, or 15,00,000 bushels more than were harvested last year.

Post-Holiday Business Sentiment Improved Small Attendance Lessens Significance U. S. Treasury Issues in Firm Demand

New York, July 5.—Both business and investor sentiment appeared improved after the holiday and prices for commodities, as well as securities, tended higher. Markets, however, were virtually untested. In grains, the recovery looked technical, following as it did the selling move of previous trading days. In shares and bonds gains were substantial on small volume. A little more buying might have, in fact, produced a big bulge, as owners of most securities want more than present bids. Small attendance in Wall Street as many prolonged their holiday, and disposition of other traders to operate in a small way until legislative uncertainties are disposed of, could explain meager dealings. One restrictive influence, no doubt, was whether the Administration would win or lose in the vote on the money bill, scheduled some three hours after the close.

Danzig Tension Relaxed

Superficial signs of a slackening in the tension over Danzig may have produced the more relieved, or cheerful, feeling in financial quarters. Beyond a somewhat unnatural quietness in the Polish-German controversy and absence of further warnings from London and Paris, there was nothing to indicate German ambitions have been modified or Anglo-French counter measures relaxed. Late last week Wall Street had the fatalistic feeling that the move on the Free City by the Reich would be within a few days and would result in war. Today observers were not so sure.

Some thought that Hitler's immediate plans may be held up because of the indicated rift between Japanese military and civil authorities. The army wants an out and out union with the Rome-Berlin axis and the government has qualms about such policy. Recent Japanese military moves to irritate and embarrass Britain and France have obviously been synchronized with steps in the Hitler program to dominate central Europe.

Railroad Stocks Leaders

Rails, rail equipments, motors, stores and an assortment of blue-chip manufacturing issues were leaders in the recovery which produced an improvement of 0.76 point in the composite price of 100 key big board stocks. The turnover amounted to only 351,900 shares, with but 578 issues traded, of which 371 advanced, 80 declined and 127 were unchanged. Industrial and utility bonds were narrow and dull against the background of buoyant rail liens. Leading European exchanges recovered a little in terms of the dollar. Wheat advanced ⅜ to ¾ cent while cotton was steady.

In stock market transactions today the pivotals were more prominent despite failure of volume to improve. Steel common was up a point on the first transaction and closed 1¼ net higher. General Motors, despite a strike affecting its tool and die division, added 1¼ and Chrysler rose 1¾. U. S. Rubber went above 40 with a gain of ⅞ on the best volume of any listed issue. Union Pacific and Atchison were strong in a generally firm rail group where buying was stimulated by the marked rise in carloadings for virtually all major roads. Coppers were bought steadily as trade reports disclosed the current domestic buying movement to be no mere flash in the pan, and estimates appeared that world and United States stocks of the red metal were reduced last month.

Store Shares Favored

The mail order shares again received attention in a favored merchandising division. Montgomery Ward, one of the 15 most active stocks, was close to 50 with a net gain of 1⅛, Johns Manville enjoyed its best day in some time, closing at 70½, up 2½. Others to add a point or more included Westinghouse, General Electric, Telephone and Allied Chemical. Quite a few of the low-priced issues, including Columbia Gas & Electric, Radio and Aviation Corporation made frequent appearances on the tape, the two former at advancing prices.

Oils were again noticeably hesitant. The American Petroleum figures on production and stocks for the week ended July 1 were delayed because of the holiday. The leading marketer in New England territory announced a small reduction in the retail gasoline price which scarcely relieved trade worries over the inadequacy of profit markings for the refiners. Aircrafts showed substantial recoveries following publication of the Commerce Department figures on May exports of airplanes and parts. These were at a new monthly peak, 40 per cent above April and 33 per cent ahead of May, 1938.

Bond Market Firm

Listed bonds were firm in another quiet session today. The holiday brought nothing to increase interest in senior securities, but a rallying tendency nevertheless was in evidence. Turnover amounted only to $4,110,000. United States Treasury issues rallied on the postponement of the expected European crisis. Speculative corporation bonds were marked slightly higher.

The recovery in United States Government obligations was fairly impressive. It suggested a resumption of long-term bond buying on the part of banks, but the actual business transacted was on a small scale. Gains ranged to ⅜ point in the longer issues, and the more active guaranteed issues also were better. Highest rated utility, railroad and industrial bonds tended to improve fractionally, and some again are at highs of the year.

Rail Issues in Demand

Medium-priced carrier bonds developed a good tone on modest inquiry. Gains ranged to 2 points, but mostly were fractional. Most borderline and default rails also improved, although exceptions were noted here and there. Holding company and convertible bonds were firm on the advance of related equities. Local transactions advanced, and some inquiry developed also for communications bonds and other special groups.

Brazilian bonds improved 1 to 3 points on the official confirmation of the resumption of debt service. Other Latin-American default bonds were quiet, and the European variety of disregarded pledges also remained dull. Polish bonds were idle and Italian issues better. The high-grade foreigns of Scandinavian, Canadian and Australian origin were marked upward.

Business Loans Gain $10,000,000 in Week

The Federal Reserve Board said yesterday that commercial, industrial and agricultural loans of banks, particularly in New York, increased in the week ended June 28.

In a weekly survey of 101 leading cities, delayed from Monday by the holiday, the board showed that business loans of the banks in these tal of $3,833,000,000. New York City of $3,833,000,000. New York City alone had an increase of $12,000,000, which was offset by declines elsewhere. The increase followed two weeks in which the loans, for the country as a whole, had decreased.

Brokers' Loans Decline

New York, July 5 (AP).—Collateral borrowings by New York Stock Exchange members totaled $537,261,959 as of business June 30, a decrease of $8,714,020 from the May 31 total, the exchange reported today.

Failures Decrease

New York, July 5 (AP).—Business failures in the United States dropped to 233 during the week ended June 29 from 264 in the preceding week, Dun & Bradstreet reported today. In the comparable week last year the total was 256.

Mexico to Sell $18,000,000 Oil A Year to Brazil

Mexico City, July 5 (AP).—Conclusion of an $18,000,000 deal with the Mexican government petroleum agency was announced today by Santo Vahlis, representative of the Brazilian firm of Correa and Castro. Under the agreement, he said, Mexico will sell approximately 5,500,000 barrels of oil annually to Brazil along with asphalt and refined petroleum products.

The deal was expected to result in trade far in excess of the $18,000,000 figure annually, because, Vahlis said, it "naturally will open new means of commercial exchange between Mexico and Brazil." He emphasized that it was a cash and not a barter transaction. Brazil, being a big purchaser of Mexican oil, naturally hoped to sell Mexico whatever products she might need, it was explained.

Working with Vahlis was Fernando Saldana Galvan, head of Mexico's government-controlled newsprint agency. Some time ago he was sent by President Lazaro Cardenas to Brazil and elsewhere in South America to seek markets for oil produced by properties of United States, British and Netherlands operators which was expropriated in March, 1938.

Vahlis said, "We are going to install a most modern refinery at Rio de Janeiro, costing more than $3,000,000. We are also organizing a direct steamship line between Tampico and Rio de Janeiro for handling the oil."

Mild Business Rise Expected In 3d Quarter

Production Estimated At 15 Per Cent Above Same 1938 Period

New York, July 4.—Although nothing spectacular in the way of business improvement is expected over the next several months, prospects favor a moderate upward trend, the Standard Statistics Co. says today.

The third quarter of the year opens with the level of business somewhat below where it was at the beginning of the year and with the majority of alleged business deterrents and irritants quite as much in evidence as when Congress convened six months ago.

Despite wide and erratic fluctuations in stock prices since the fall of 1938, business activity in the aggregate has been exceptionally stable. The Standard Statistics Co. index of industrial production has held within the limits of 82 and 90 throughout this period, after the customary correction for seasonal variation. This is an unusually narrow range. The steady outpouring of money by the Government has contributed to the stability of trade, particularly in the consumers' goods lines.

For the third quarter as a whole, it is estimated that production will average about 15 per cent higher than in the corresponding period of 1938. Actually, physical outputs will be smaller in July and August than in the recent past, but as it is estimated that the let downs will be less than the usual seasonal slide, the production index will show an uptrend for the period just ahead. The September index should reach a level about 5 per cent above that for June, after seasonal correction—precisely where it was last January.

Legal Trust Investments for D. C.

Col. Theodore Cogswell, register of wills for the District, yesterday announced the list of legal investments for trust funds here for the next six months.

The new list contained the bonds of 67 counties, cities and other governmental units. Issues of the Consolidated Gas Electric Light & Power Co. of Baltimore were among those of 11 public utilities recognized as legal investments.

A number of railroad securities were removed from the list because they failed to meet the legal requirement that companies earn one and a half times their fixed charges in the preceding fiscal year. Among the bonds taken off the list were those of Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad, Duluth Missabe & Iron Range Railroad, Louisville & Nashville Railroad Co., Reading Co., Texas & Pacific Railroad Co., and Western Maryland Railway.

Contract Bridge

By Florence Osborn.

Sometimes the discussion concerns a decision so fine that it is no issue at all. Take this hand as an example. Husband and wife are at odds as to whether six clubs or six no trump should be the final contract.

West	East
♠ 9	♠ A K Q 5
♡ A J 10	♡ K 5 3 2
◇ K Q J 6 3 2	◇ None
♣ Q J 10	♣ A K 7 6 4

Actually it makes little difference at which contract the hand is played as long as a small slam is reached. Technically six no trump is the best bid, as the point value is higher. In either case, the king of diamonds must be led and a heart or a spade discarded to establish the two diamond tricks in the West hand. Even at clubs, if the ace should cover, second hand, declarer should discard instead of ruffing, in order to guard against the chance of five trumps being in one hand.

Slam problems nearly always lead to questions and discussion. W. F. G. wants to know what is the best contract for these cards, six or seven, and how the bidding should go. Neither side is vulnerable and South is dealer.

West	East
♠ K 6 2	♠ None
♡ None	♡ A K J 5
◇ K Q 8 7 3	◇ A 10 6 4
♣ A 9 8 5 4	♣ Q J 7 3 2

In the bidding West opened with one diamond and North overcalled with one spade. From there it might proceed like this:

West	North	East	South
1 ◇	1 ♠	2 ♠	Pass
3 ♣	Pass	3 ♡	Pass
4 ♣	Pass	4 ◇	Pass
5 ◇	Pass	6 ♣	Pass
Pass or 6 ◇	Pass

With such a freak, seven probably should not be bid. East and West are likely to find the clubs and diamondes bunched with one adversary and void with the other.

The Federal Diary

By The Diarist

JUST HOW GOOD is excellent is a problem that the United States Housing Authority is trying to determine. It doesn't claim to have reached the kernel yet, but it believes it has picked off some of the shell. Requirements ("not intended to be complete") are listed in its service manual. If you pass all of them, you are probably too excellent to exist. Get out your pencil and check them off anyway. It may pull you together for the day's work. Here goes:

1. Within regular hours of duty, employe established unique record for quantity and quality of work done.

2. Performed unique service of extraordinary value.

3. On own initiative devised new and useful system or device.

4. Performed work under unusually difficult conditions with unusual distinction.

The USHA has examples in its records of employes who seem to have passed some of the tests. One of them developed a waterproofing system (not a raincoat), which resulted in improved construction methods. Another worked out forms and filing systems for use in statistical analyses of data. "Initiative in this respect," comments the USHA with a pat on the back, "was considered beyond the normal expectation for this employe's class.

THE FBI USES its dummy, Oscar, as you may have heard, in a very rough fashion. He gets shot at, accused of murder and once in a while he even commits murders so that J. Edgar Hoover's schoolboys can picee their wits together and solve the crime.

Over at the Smithsonian, however, Oscar II is going to have a much easier time of it. All he will have to do is sit still and look jaunty behind the controls of the plane built by the Wright brothers in the summer of 1909. Beginning with the thirtieth anniversary of the Army Air Corps this August, Oscar II will have a lifetime job as part of the permanent exhibition of the aircraft collection.

If anybody ever deserved a soft spot, it's Oscar II. Paul Garber, assistant curator in charge of the airplane display, put him together from hands and legs scattered all over the place. Thoroughly renovated, he joins the population of approximately 200 dummies at the museum.

In addition to assembling Oscar II, Garber had to find him a uniform. And the uniform had to resemble the kind that the corps was wearing back in the salad days of the century. Garber purchased most of it from back garrets at Army supply stores. A little bit of it he had to improvise himself.

Then, in order to give some of the newer articles a vintage look, they were washed to a slightly faded color before Oscar II climbed into them. The shoes were scuffed by hand.

The dummy serves another purpose, too. It seems that the old Wright plane, when it is presented to an unpracticed eye, appears to have neither back nor front. Equipped with propellers in both directions, it's a trifle hard to tell which way it intends to fly. Oscar solves this by sitting with his face to the front.

IF YOU CAN CARVE your name on a piece of rock 15 feet long and one foot high, stay away from Yellowstone National Park. The police will be coming after you. Supt. Edmund B. Rogers, who is much vexed at this type of copybook vandalism, says that too many visitors have left their names on rock formations at Yellowstone.

Some of the extroverts, claims Supt. Rogers, wringing his hands, use their fingers. Others resort to pencils and sticks and some of them can make a broken knife blade do the trick.

"This is practically the last time I am going to talk about it," continues Supt. Rogers. "Either stick to writing your name on postcards or find yourself in jail."

WAY BACK in January, the United States Travel Bureau issued a statement that the 1939 travel outlook was very bright. They hung this sunny situation on two factors—the New York World's Fair and the San Francisco ditto.

As it turns out, according to one of Ben Candland's right-hand men, it was even brighter . . . and busier than that. Talking about it yesterday, he said that the rush for information started earlier than usual this year. A whole month before the Frisco exposition he was answering an average of 15 and 20 telephone calls a day in addition to taking care of questions at the counter.

THAT OLD UP and down problem of high tariff-low tariff doesn't seem to affect much of the country beyond its stern and rockbound coasts. According to the Bureau of Agricultural Economics, interstate trade barrier bills were voted out by over a dozen State legislatures at their 1939 sessions.

The 1939 record is the best in many a year, it is reported.

Only two States, continues the report, enacted laws which may set up more hurdles for dairy products. These are Maine and Wyoming.

Vermont's House of Representatives passed a bill to provide a tax on oleomargarine, but it was killed when it reached the Vermont senate.

Chapter XXX

BUCK SAID, "What you grinnin' about?"

Judy shook his head. He could imagine his mother saying, "If it takes bees to git a Forrester clean, I'll hive 'em a swarm."

Buck had half a dozen stings but Jody had escaped with two. They approached the bee tree cautiously. The smudge had been properly placed. The bees were drugged with the heavy somke. They swarmed slowly around the cavity, searching for their queen.

Buck split a wider opening and used his sheath knife to hack away the edges. He cleaned away trash and splinters and reached in with the knife. He turned, amazed.

"Great day! They's a wash-tub o' honey here. The tree's full."

He brought out a slab, golden and dripping. The comb was rough and dark, but the honey was paler than fine syrup. They filled the lard-pail and carried it between them to the house. Ma Baxter gave them a cypress tub to take back with them.

Buck said, "Now a wash tub o' biscuits is all more is needed."

The return load was heavy. It was the largest yield, Buck said, he had ever seen from a bee-tree since he was a boy.

He said, "When I go home tomorrer and tell my folks, they'll not believe me."

She said slowly, "I reckon you'll want to carry some back with you."

"No more'n I kin carry in my belly. I got my eye on two-three trees in the swamp. Do they fall me, I'm like to come beggin'."

Ma Baxter said, "You've been mighty neighborly. Mebbe some day we'll have aplenty and kin do for you."

Jody said, "I wish you'd not go, Buck."

THE BIG MAN shoved him playfully.

"With me gone, you'll not have no time to nuss that fawn."

Buck was plainly restless. He shuffled his feet at supper and paced up and down afterward. He looked at the sky.

He said, "A good clare night for ridin'."

Jody said, "How come you anxious all to once?"

Buck paused in his pacing.

"I get that-a-way. I like to come and I like to go. Wherever I be, I'm content a while, and then I jest someway ain't content no more. When me and Lem and Mill-wheel goes off hoss-tradin' to Kentucky, I'll swear, I figger I'll bust 'til I git home agin." He paused and stared into the sunset. He added in a low voice, "And I'm right smart fretted about Fodder-wing. I got a feelin' here—" he thumped his hairy chest—"he ain't doin' good."

"Wouldn't somebody of come?"

"That's it. If they didn't know your Pa was bad off, they'd of ridden over jest to say Howdy. They figgered your Pa needed he'p and they'd not like to toll me away, was the news bad or worrisome."

He waited nervously for dark. He wanted to be done with his job, and gone. Penny was as good a night hunter as any Forrester. Jody was tempted to brag of the varmints his father had disposed of, but that might cut him out of a night-prowl with Buck. He held his tongue. He helped Buck prepare the fatwood splinters for the fire-pan.

Buck said, "My Uncle Cotton had red hair. They was a heap of it, stood up like a haystack, and red as a fightin' cock's comb. He was fire-hountin' one night, and the handle was a mite short, and a spark from the pan set his hair a-fire. And you know when he hollered to Pa for he'p, Pa didn't pay him no mind. He jest thought the moon had done rose and was shinin' through Uncle Cotton's hair."

Jody gaped.

"Is that true, Buck?"

Buck whittled busily.

"Now if you was to tell me a tale," he said. "I'd not ask you no sich a question."

PENNY CALLED from his bedroom.

They came to his room.

"If 'twas a panther hunt you was goin' on," he said, "I'll swear I'd feel good enough to go with you."

Buck said, "Now I'd jest carry you on a panther hunt, did I have my dogs."

"Why, my pair'll out-hunt your whole pack." He asked innocently, "How did you-all come out with that sorry dog I traded you?"

Buck drawled, "Why, that dog's proved out the fastest and the finest and the hardest-huntin' and the fearlessest of any dog we've ever had on the place. All he needed was men to train him."

Penny chuckled.

He said, "I'm proud you was smart enough to make somethin' outen him. Where's he now?"

"Well, he was so blasted good, he put t'other dogs so to shame, Lem couldn't abide it, and he hauled off and shot him and buried him in the Baxter cemetery one night."

Penny said gravely, "I noticed the new grave and I figgered you-all had give outen buryin'-ground. I'll whittle a head-stone, time I git my strength. I'll carve on it, 'Here lies a Forrester, mourned by all his kin.'"

He grinned broadly and slapped the covers of his bed.

"Give in, Buck," he said, "give in."

Buck wiped his beard.

"All right," he said, "I'll take it for funnin'. But don't look to Lem to take it for ary thing but a cold-out insult."

Penny said, "No hard feelin's. I got none, and I hope you-all'll hold none, Lem nor nobody."

"Lem's different. He takes things personal."

"That grieves me. I pitched into the fight betwixt him and Oliver because they was too many of you on one side."

Buck said, "Well, blood's thicker'n water. We fight amongst ourselves now and agin, but when it's us and t'other feller, we allus fight on the same side o' the creek. But me and you has got no call to fall out."

WORDS BEGAN FIGHTS and words ended them.

Jody asked, "If fellers didn't say quarrelin' things, would they put in to fight?"

Penny said, "I'm feered so. I oncet seed a pair o' deef dummies havin' it. But they do say they got a sign language, and likely one passed the insult in a sign."

Buck said, "Hit's male nature, boy. Wait 'til you git to courtin' and you'll git your breeches dusted many a time."

"But nobody but Lem and Oliver was courtin', and here all us Baxters and all you Forresters was in to it."

Penny said, "They's no end to what a man'll fight for. I even knowed a preacher takened off his coat and fit ary man wouldn't agree to infant damnation. All a feller kin do, is fight for what he figgers is right, and the devil take the hindmost."

Buck said, "Listen. I think I heered a fox bark then in the hammock."

At first the night seemed silent. Then sounds drifted like clouds into their hearing. An owl hooted. A tree-frog scraped his fiddle and predicted rain.

Buck said, "There he be."

A thin bark sounded in the distance, shrill and mournful.

Buck said, "Now wouldn't that be music to my pore dogs? Wouldn't they sing to that sopranner?"

Penny said, "If you and Jody don't clean out the litter tonight, bring your dogs on the next moon and we'll have us a chase."

Buck said, "Let's us git goin', Jody. That yipper'll about make the cornfield time we do." He picked up Penny's shotgun from the corner. "I'll borry this tonight. Seems to me I've seed it before."

"Jest don't bury it beside the dog," Penny said. "Hit's ralely a good gun."

Jody packed his muzzle-loader over his shoulder. He went out with Buck. The fawn heard him and bleated from the shed. They walked under the mulberries and crossed the split-rail fence into the cornfield. Buck walked north down the first row. At the far end of the field he began walking across the ends of the rows. He stopped at each row and focussed the light from the fire-pan down the length of the field. Mid-way he stopped. He turned and nudged Jody. Where the light came to rest, two fiery green agates caught the light.

He murmured, "Slip half-way up the row. I'll keep the light on him. Don't git in the path o' the light. When his eyes looks as big as a shillin', give it to him, right between 'em."

Jody crept forward, hugging the corn at his left. The green lights were extinguished a moment, then stared again. He lifted his gun and allowed the light from the blazing splinters in the fire-pan to slip down the barrell. He pulled the trigger. The gun, as always, knocked him off balance. He started to run forward to ascertain his hit, but Buck hissed at him.

"Pest. You got him. Leave him lay. Come back."

He crept along the row. Buck handed him the shotgun.

"They's likely another here clost."

Tax on Bonds To Ruin Cities, Says LaGuardia

Mayor Tells House They Cannot Stand Increased Costs

By the Associated Press.

A Congressional committee heard Mayor LaGuardia of New York declare yesterday no city in this country could "stand the shock" of increased financing costs which would be imposed by Federal taxation of State and municipal securities.

Appearing as president of the United States Conference of Mayors, LaGuardia told the House Ways and Means Committee most of the Nation's cities were struggling to meet their bills.

"You cannot put anything more on real estate or that will crash," the stocky New Yorker declared in reminding the committee that municipalities relied chiefly on that form of taxation. "If it does crash, it will carry every city in the country with it."

LaGuardia was one of a group of State and municipal representatives who attacked the proposal to tax future issues of Federal securities and permit the Federal Government to tax income from State and municipal securities.

Threatens Tax on U. S.

LaGuardia declared elimination of present exemptions would destroy "all fiscal comity" between the Federal and State governments.

"If you tax municipal bonds," he said heatedly, "I'll tax every bit of real estate the Federal Government owns in New York City—and I'll collect it, too."

LaGuardia told the committee the legislation was "150 years too late."

Cites Subway Bonds

"These exemptions are partof our fiscal system and have been since the founding of the Federal Government," he said. He added that any change at this time would not only create "havoc" for many cities but would "disturb our whole financial system."

To illustrate what would happen in municipal financing if income from municipal securities were taxed, LaGuardia said a proposed New York bond issue of $315,000,000 to purchase the Interborough Rapid Transit subway system would be "out the window." He explained the interest rate now contemplated for the issue was 3 per cent for 40 years. He said it would have to be jumped to 4¼ per cent if the pending legislation were enacted.

Dr. Smith Faces Detention In New Case if He Gets Bail

District Attorney Asks L. S. U. President Be Turned Over to Him on Charge Of Manipulating $400,000 Loans

By the Associated Press

Baton Rouge, La., July 5.—While campus friends strove futilely to raise $50,000 bail for Dr. James Monroe Smith, fresh charges struck today at the former university president's hopes for early release from jail.

District Atorney Charles A. Byrne disclosed at New Orleans that he had asked Baton Rouge authorities to turn Smith over to him, if and when the educator makes bond on charges that he stole great sums from Louisiana State University in the nine years he served as its president.

Byrne said Smith was wanted in New Orleans for alleged manipulation of loans from banks which Attorney General David M. Ellison said amounted to $400,000.

Meanwhile Smith silently mapped his defense plans from his jail cell—and none could say what form this defense would take, nor whom it would touch.

Hints of further sensations in the case which already has rocked the political dynasty of the slain Huey Long came yesterday when Smith was reported to have said he would "not be the goat" in the scandal.

But today District Attorney Dewey Sanchez said the prisoner had denied making such a statement, and added:

"Dr. Smith has made no statement for publication and says he will not do so until he has engaged counsel to represent him."

Newspapermen were refused permission to visit Smith on the fourth floor of the East Baton Rouge Parish Jail.

The probable length of his stay in this jail hard by the scenes of his educational triumphs also was undetermined. Campus friends apparently had failed to raise the required $50,000, but a report late today said a prominent New Orleans business man would sign the bond.

Little progress was noted today in the inquiry into tangled L. S. U. affairs. The special district grand jury that indicted Smith and four others examined only two witnesses then recessed until Friday, presumably to await completion of an audit of university books.

Smith was returned yesterday from Brockville, Ontario, where he went after his resignation a week ago Sunday. He was jailed after his wife, indicted as an accomplice, was freed under $7,500 bond.
